REPORT $1 BEER CARDS DOOMED

Today

This Is His Day
Beer, April 3
Farmers Fight. Bankers Not
6,370,000 Shares in 2 Days

—By Arthur Brisbane—

A BOY was born in a small Scotch village, according to tradition, about 372 A.D., more than 1500 years ago. An Irish "king," more accurately described as many kings then were, as "an enterprising pirate," raiding the coast of Britain, took the boy, 16 years old, to Ireland as a slave, to take care of sheep and swine. He escaped to Britain, became a priest and returned to Ireland to teach Christianity and the doctrine of the Trinity.

That doctrine he illustrated by picking a shamrock and showing the three leaves growing on one stem.

The boy was St. Patrick and this is his day.

He feared no man or devil, not even the proud pagan Irish king on the hill of Tara. That's why he lives in history as typical of the Irish race.

Beer on April 3, real beer, in casks, bottles, in steins and in "flats" is the news.

Hotels, after years and years of oasis sadness, are buying glasses and more jugs and mugs of a certain kind.

Hopeful young gentlemen are speculating in the stock of concerns that make beer bottles, and Uncle Sam expects to get $150,000,000 a year in the way of taxes.

Wine containing 3.05 of alcohol is also made legal, but there is no such wine. You cannot buy or drink what does not exist. Wine growers might make natural wine, as nature creates it when you squeeze juice from grapes, and let it ferment, then extract two-thirds or three-quarters of the alcohol. But that would be not real wine.

You will read today the President's plan for farm relief, and form your opinion concerning it. It is difficult to help that which is not organized for production, distribution or self-defense.

You see farmers fighting each other in a milk war, one farmer spilling on the ground the milk that belongs to another farmer. You don't see bankers engaged in a money war, spilling each other's money on the ground.

The President is reported to have said, frankly, that he cannot guarantee his bill or its results, but at least he will try.

Wall Street yesterday sold 3,300,000 shares of stock, 230,000 more than the day before, over 6,000,000 shares in two days.

Brokers, who have been walking through the valley of the shadow of the depression, feel almost cheerful.

Bonds, especially railroad bonds, went upward, like a captive balloon with the rope cut. Wheat and cotton also rose.

Stock values have increased by many billions since March 4. Oil stocks alone have increased in value more than two hundred and eleven millions.

Nevertheless, do not forget or despise warnings against gambling.

The League of Nations, with Ramsay MacDonald leading, criticizes Mr. Hitler's new defiant Germany without exactly contradicting Germany's statement that unless Germany is treated fairly the world is headed for destruction, like the swine that went over the cliff.

MacDonald worries because he can see no way to keep commercial or "civil" airships from sudden conversion to war purposes. There is no way, of course. Any airship can drop bombs that will explode and poison gas that will make life in a city impossible.

Mr. MacDonald will visit Mussolini in Rome, and their conversation will be interesting, but private. Mussolini's courage and will power saved Italy from chaos after the big war. It is not easy to foresee what would happen after another big war.

Prof. Einstein will not go back to Germany until government conditions improve, and that irritates and disturbs Mr. Hitler's government, which is not surprising.

To have one of the world's greatest scientists refuse to return to his country, in which science is worshipped almost as a religion, is not pleasant for those responsible for the government.

Mr. Hitler might retaliate by cancelling Prof. Einstein's passport, but other nations would be only too glad to welcome him, with no passport other than his own fame.

President Roosevelt's election, and more particularly his prompt actions and result-getting, have proved a blessing to the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies. Since March 4 President Roosevelt has received 14,000 telegrams, all praising him, some covering pages. Wires came thickest and fastest just after the President, in simple words, explained the banking situation "on the air."

House to Speed Farm Relief

BEER BILL IN CONFERENCE MONDAY

Economy Measure Goes to Roosevelt for Signature Today

TODAY IN CONGRESS

1—Conference on 3.05 per beer and wine bill voted by Senate with amendments reducing the alcoholic content of beer from the House figure of 3.2 per cent delayed till Monday because the Senate is in adjournment over the week-end.

2—Rep. John W. McCormack of Boston, chairman of the committee that drafted the House bill, asserts he will figh the Senate amendments so as to restore the 3.2 per cent figure which means 4 per cent alcohol by volume. The Senate figure 3.05 by weight means 3.75 per cent by volume.

3—President Roosevelt's farm relief bill taken up by House and Senate agricultural committees. Chairman of House committee says it will be introduced in that branch tomorrow. Senate is adjourned till Monday.

4—Economy bill, empowering President to slash veterans' compensation and Federal employes' pay goes to Mr. Roosevelt for signature today and is expected to become law immediately.

Washington, March 17 (INS)—The administration's far mrelief bill, designed to boost prices on absisc agricultural commodities produced this year, was before Congress today with Democratic leaders promising speedy enactment.

Agricultural committees of Senate and House began consideration of the measure, with Chairman Jones (D) of Texas, of the House committee planning to bring the bill up for passage in that branch tomorrow. The Senate is in adjournment till Monday.

The bill is declared by farm experts in Congress to embrace one of the most sweeping efermgency farm relief plans ever proposed. It was recommended by President Roosevelt with the frank statement that it was an experiment.

PROVISIONS OF BILL

The basic plan of the bill is to remove the agricultural surplus, which depresses prices, by limiting production during the 1933 crop year. Because the planting season is about to begin, extraordinary speed in passage is planned.

The basic agricultural commodities embraced in the bill are wheat, cotton, corn, hogs, cattle, sheep, rice, tobacco, m¾ilk and milk products. The Secretary of Agriculture can drop any product from operation of the bill.

A processing tax would be levied upon all products, similar to the billion-dollar tax proposed in the domestic allotment bill, to meet the cost of operation.

The money would be used primarily to withdraw land from pro-

Missing Student

Basil Francis, 18, Boston Swimming Association aquatic star and Worcester Academy sophomore, was being sought today throughout New England following his disappearance after classes Wednesday. His home is in Providence.

4 ROB AND BEAT FISHERMAN

Attacked by four men and robbed of $100 on Saratoga st., East Boston, early today, Manus Brady, 24, of 279 Concord st., Portland, Me., was taken for a ride and dumped onto the freight tracks near South Station. He was found by police of Division 4 and at City Hospital was found to be suffering from contusions and abrasions of the head, face and body.

Brady, a fisherman had been visiting friends in East Boston before he was attacked. He told police he fought the four men before being forced into the auto and the next thing he remembered was when taken to the hospital.

FRANCIS, STAR SWIMMER, MISSING

Worcester Academy Student Disappears From Classes

The disappearance of Basil Francis, 18-year-old Boston Swimming Association aquatic star and Worcester Academy senior, was revealed today, despite efforts of school authorities to keep it secret.

DISAPPEARED WEDNESDAY

Francis, a member of last year's Olympic team, dropped from sight after classes at the Worcester institution on Wednesday. A check on all sources of information has failed to reveal the slightest clue as to his whereabouts.

After fruitless search in Worcester, Headmaster Samuel Foss Holmes notified the boy's father, Arthur R. Francis, of Irving ave., Providence.

He expressed little alarm at his son's disappearance, basing his confidence on the fact the youth had been missing so short a time. He could ascribe no reason for a voluntary disappearance.

He said that the youth had no difficulty with his studies and that he was in the best of spirits when he saw him two weeks ago.

SCHOOL HEAD SILENT

Worcester police were not asked by school authorities to aid in the search. Headmaster Holmes at first refused to comment on the case, but it was learned that he had communicated with Francis' father.

Later Holmes declared that he felt no alarm at the boy's absence. He said the youth was inclined to be temperamental and that recent scholastic difficulties may have given him the idea of looking for work.

It was also learned that Francis had brooded because a cold and a strained leg muscle had prevented him from competing in a swimming meet against Huntington School last Saturday.

The boy is well known among swimming enthusiasts. He holds several New England sprint records. He went to California last year with the Olympic team, but was eliminated in the trials.

DeValera Voices Best Wishes of Erin for U. S.

Universal Service

Eamon De Valera, president of the executive council of the Irish Free State, today sent a message to the American people. The message was directed to Bradley Kelly, director of radio station WINS in New York, and was read in a special St. Patrick's day broadcast last night by Roderick J. Kennedy, grand marshal of today's parade in New York.

BY EAMON DE VALERA
President of the Irish Free State Council, in a Message to America.

I am very glad to have the opportunity of sending a short message to our friends in America on this, our national saint's day.

I wish in the first place to express my most earnest hope that the economic difficulties under which your country at present is laboring may quickly disappear and that God may guide your ruler to find a means by which the national riches of your country may be utilized for the well-being of the whole American people.

Notwithstanding the crisis which at present is occupying your minds, I know that you will want to hear a word from me about the hope of my government for the immediate future of our country.

The object which we set out to obtain when we took office a year ago was to effect such alteration in our economic system as would enable the mass of our citizens to obtain a decent livelihood in their own country and reach a standard of living which would allow them to devote more of their energy to the development of our traditional Christian and cultural ideals, without which the nation cannot survive.

We have already achieved no small measure of success, and the people have shown their appreciation of our efforts by giving us a very largely increased number of votes in the recent general election.

I know you wish us well in our task as we wish you well in yours. Ireland is marching forward to her predestined goal, and God is with us, and we will succeed.

JOAN BRANDS DIETZ SUIT A HOLDUP

Facts of Alienation Action Against Doug Known to Her

Los Angeles, March 17 (US)—Filing of a $50,000 alienation of affections suit against Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., was followed by disclosure of a secret investigation of an alleged "extortion plot" against the young film star.

The suit was filed in Superior Court by Jorgen Dietz, who, in addition, filed a $20,000 action against Fairbanks for alleged false imprisonment.

CHARGES LOVE THEFT

Fairbanks flatly characterized the case as an "attempted extortion" and District Attorney Buron Fitts stated he had investigated it along that line some months ago.

Dietz declared in his complaint that the actor—who is the husband of Joan Crawford—deprived him of the affections of his wife, Mrs. Solveig Dietz and resulted in their separation on April 15, 1932.

In the suit charging false imprisonment, M. C. Levee, former business manager for Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., and Mary Pickford, is named as a co-defendant. Dietz asserts that, under threats of arrest, Fairbanks, Jr., and Levee forced him to go to the district attorney's office last December and that he was later "imprisoned" in a hotel room, after having been threatened with arrest for extortion.

District Attorney Buron Fitts said today that Dietz had been questioned in his office by Chief Investigator Blayney Matthews, "relative to an asserted $6000 extortion plot against young Fairbanks."

NEVER IN CUSTODY

The district-attorney denied that Dietz had ever been in custody in connection with the case or had ever been required to sign any agreement not to press an action against Fairbanks.

Fitts last night issued a statement in which he said that he had entered the case after Will H. Hays had complained.

It was claimed that Dietz and the former wife of a Hollywood film director, were attempting to "sell" Fairbanks a diamond necklace, alleged to be worth $300, for $6000.

Fairbanks and Miss Crawford, married three years ago, are known as one of the most glamorous couples in the film colony. They have vigorously denied frequent rumors that they were on the point of separating.

JOAN UNDERSTANDS

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., said:

"I am not going to dodge the issue this time, because I feel that it is an out and out attempt at extortion.

"The most unfortunate part of it all is that Joan and my mother, back East, innocently in the background, may suffer.

Joan Crawford, wife of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., said:

"There is nothing for me to say except that I have known all about this from the start. We have discussed these flagrant charges together. It is an outrageous injustice, and there is no truth whatever in them."

Risque Stories of Husband Frees Her

Hollywood, Cal., March 17—Marjorie Crawford, aviatrix and picture actress, became so annoyed at risque stories told by her husband, Bill Wellman, film director and former war flier, that a domestic break ensued, she testified in divorce court. Wellman did not contest, and she was awarded a decree.

The director paid her $10,000 cash and signed promissory notes for the other $20,000.

Love Suit Finds Them United in Denials

JOAN CRAWFORD

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., screen star and husband of Joan Crawford, also a film favorite, was today defendant in a $50,000 alienation of affections suit brought in Los Angeles by Jorgen Dietz, who charges that Fairbanks deprived him of the affections of his wife, Mrs. Solveig Dietz, resulting in their separation last April. Joan is standing by Doug in his denials.

POLICE ASK TO EXHUME BODY

Fall River, March 17—Local police will ask District Attorney Crossley today for permission to exhume the body of Blanche Lavoie, who died in May, 1929, as a result of disclosures made by her father, Joseph Lavoie, rescued on Tuesday night in an alleged death plot to get $1000 insurance.

Lavoie told police that the circumstances of his daughter's death were "suspicious." He said his second wife, now being held with Elias J. Soares in $10,000 as accessories before the fact of an attempt to murder him by drowning him in Mt. Hope Bay, repeatedly declared that Blanche "was in the way."

Antone Cabral, also held in $10,000, is charged with assault with intent to murder Lavoie, and with drunken driving and drunkenness.

STATE BANKING NEAR NORMAL

Practically all the State's banking institutions were at a condition close to normal today.

As a result of orders of Bank Commissioner Guy at midnight, restrictions were lifted from the Maynard Trust Co and the Billerica Trust Co. This brought the total of the State's 223 banks now open to 194. In addition, all 227 co-operative banks are open, and the 193 savings banks and 297 credit unions have resumed business.

All banks are now operating under the conditions announced early this week. They will continue to do so until further notice. Others are expected to reopen as soon as officials can look over their condition.

With the bank situation well in hand the bill detailing the method by which certain banks will be reorganized and strengthened has been sent to the Legislature by Gov. Ely with recommendation for its immediate passage. The primary purpose of the measure is to make state laws conform with the federal emergency banking law enacted on March 9.

PERMITS TO BE ISSUED ONLY FOR HARD LIQUOR

Report of Commission to Be Given Today to Legislature

The report of the special commission on state liquor control laws, regarding the supervision of the sale in Massachusetts of beer, wine and liquors, will be presented with the recommendations of Governor Ely to the Legislature today.

It is reported that those drinking beer and wines will not be required to procure individual permits under the proposed new liquor regulations. The only instance where permits will be required will be in the case of those purchasing hard liquors, it is understood. These permits will cost $1.

The report was handed to the governor last night but he had no comment to make upon it or on the nature of the recommendations he would make today when the matter was presented to the Legislature.

The plan, it is understood, as drafted by the commission, is proposed for adoption in part by the state with the expected legalization of beer by Congress, and in part with the expected repeal of prohibition through action of the several states.

SPEEDY LEGISLATION

It was learned last night, despite refusal of the governor to comment, that his message to the Legislature, regarding the plan, would conform closely to the commission's report and would ask for speedy legislation to make its various provisions effective legally.

It is expected that the report of the special commission and the governor's message will be referred, in accordance with the usual procedure, to the committee on legal affairs for full hearing. The public would be thus enabled to air its views. Hearings would probably be scheduled to begin next Tuesday.

OBJECTIONS RAISED

There is little doubt that the plan, as prepared by the special

Washington, March 17 (US)—Thirsty America will have to wait at least until April 4 to get legalized beer.

As the Senate recessed last night until Monday, the beer bill cannot be sent to the White House until then for President Roosevelt's signature. Fifteen days must elapse after signing before beer can be sold.

SENATE VOTE ASSURES U. S. OF BEER EARLY IN APRIL

LEADERS PREDICT BILL WILL GO TO ROOSEVELT MONDAY

Washington, March 17 — Americans will be able to drink a glass of palatable beer and sip light wines early in April without violating the prohibition law, for the first time in 13 years.

This was assured when the Senate, 43 to 30, carried out President Roosevelt's recommendation to modify the Volstead act by passing a bill legalizing beer and wine with an alcoholic content of 3.05 per cent by weight.

The measure must now go to conference, as the Senate amended the House bill in three vital respects. It cut the legal alcoholic content of 3.2 per cent, provided by the House, to 3.05, included wine, and prohibited the sale of beer and wine to minors under the age of 16. The bill cannot go to conference till Monday, as the Senate is in adjournment until that date.

McCORMACK TO FIGHT

Leaders, however, predicted these differences would be ironed out by the end of the week and the bill sent to the White House on Monday for the President's signature. The law becomes effective 15 days after being signed.

House members declared an effort would be made in conference to restore the higher alcoholic content. Rep. McCormack (D) of Massachusetts, chairman of the sub-committee which drafted the House bill, said:

"I'll use all my influence to opopse those Senate amendments. I am sure the House will not approve 3.05 beer without a fight."

House spokesmen said the Senate wine amendment was immaterial as 3.05, or 3.2 wine, wasn't palatable anyway.

Beer of 3.05 per cent by weight is equal to 3.75 per cent by volume. Beer of 3.2 per cent is equal to 4 per cent by volume.

NO ADVERTISEMENT CURB

Just before the final vote, the Senate rejected, 50 to 23, an amendment by Senator Dill (D) of Washington, to prohibit wine or beer advertisements over the radio or in newspapers published in dry states.

Action came at the close of bitter and dramatic debate that shattered party lines. The decimated dry bloc that so long has held undisputed sway in Congress was flattened out by the wet juggernaut after the drys had made a valiant but vain stand against modification.

For more than six hours, such dry champions as Senator Morris Sheppard (D) of Texas, father of the 18th Amendment, Senator Borah (R of Idaho, and) Senator Fess (R) of Ohio, inveighed against "nullifying the Constitution."

These arguments were answered by Senator Tidings (D) of Maryland, Walsh (D) of Massachusetts and Norris (R) of Nebraska, veteran insurgent leader, a lifetime personal and political dry, who supported the bill as a temperance measure.

LINEUP OF VOTE

On the final vote, the lineup was:

For the Bill—Democrats, 31; Republicans, 12.

Against the Bill—Democrats, 13; Republicans, 17.

Paired for the bill were Senators Kendrick, McAdoo, Byrnes, Barkley, King, Democrats; Carey, Republican; and Shipstead, Farmer-Labor.

Paired against were Costigan, Glass, Smith, George, Bailey, Democrats; and Norbeck and Dickinson, Republicans.

It was announced that Senators Lewis and Coolidge, Democrats, and Davis, Republican, would have voted for the bill if present. Senator Gore was excused from voting on the ground he was pledged under his state Democratic platform to oppose the bill. Absent and unpaired were Senators Logan (D) and Cutting and Schall, Republicans. There are two vacancies.

BEER, WINE FOR 23 STATES

Beer and wine, if the latter beverage stays in the bill as finally approved by Congress, may be sold in 23 states with an aggregate population of 72,000,000, according to a survey made by the American Federation of Labor.

It is estimated the new law, passed as an emergency measure, will raise between $125,000,000 and $150,000,000 toward balancing the federal budget. The tax was fixed at $5 per barrel of 31 gallons, or approximately two cents per pint.

The bill places no restrictions on the manufacture and sale of beer and wine in state where that is authorized by state statutes, but prohibits manufacture and sale in dry states.

Economy Changes Please Foes

Washington, March 17 (AP)—A number of House members who fought original passage of the Roosevelt economy bill voted in favor of the liberalizing Senate amendments and thereby for final enactment of the legislation.

Chairman Rankin of the House veterans' committee, Reps. Patman (D., Texas), leading cash bonus sponsor, and Browning (D., Tenn.), who proposed a 25 per cent. limit on veterans' reduction, all answered "aye" late yesterday on accepting the Senate amendments. They all voted no Saturday on passing the bill.

Cullen of New York, assistant Democratic leader, voted against the bill Saturday and yesterday against the Senate amendments.

Goldfish Urge Proves Ergs in Wesleyan Tanks

Middletown, Ct., March 17 (AP)—Goldfish with silken threads tied to their tails are swimming in long, narrow science tanks in the biological laboratory of Wesleyan University.

These fish are showing their ergs, for each thread is tied to a recording lever working a needle tracing a graph on a revolving drum.

As the fish swims to and fro, the needle rises and dips. The canyons and peaks are records of his hour-by-hour activity. Every level line disclosed a catnap to the research assistant, David A. Wilson, who declares that the jagged tracings are as full of meaning in their own field, as the 1929 stock market charts.

The scientific justification for this fish labor lies in the mysteries of cross-breeding. Under the direction of Prof. Hubert B. Goodrich, Wilson is trying to discover why "Calico" goldfish, offspring of pure gold and white parents, are more active than either parent.

DERN TO MEET COLLEGE CHUM

George H. Dern of Utah, new Secretary of War, will have a long-delayed reunion with a former schoolmate, who played football with him at the University of Nebraska back in the 90's, when he arrives here today.

The other member of the twosome taking part in the reunion after 35 years of separation is Alonzo E. Yont, Boston attorney, who played halfback on the team of which Dern was one of the tackles.

Dern was captain of the 1894 team at the university, Yont said last night, and played a plugging, aggressive game. Yont said Dern went West to Utah after graduation, where he became prominent in State politics, becoming Governor, and recently being appointed Secretary of War by President Roosevelt.

commission, will provoke considerable discussion in view of the unique proposals which it is understood to contain. Strong objections were heard all day yesterday when a general idea of the contents of the plan was made known.

Principal objection is occasioned by the provision that all buyers of beer, wines and liquors must have a license.

Legislators said last night that the provision against saloons and the forbidding of drinking of anything but beer on the premises where it was sold would play into the hands of speakeasies and kitchen barrooms.

Other objections were regarding State versus local option of licensing sellers; that the Commonwealth should not become a liquor jobber and that the plan was theoretical and inapplicable to the needs of a State which had declared itself as totally opposed to prohibition of any kind in the matter of liquor.

DUCE CAUTIONS HITLER TO CURB NAZI ATTACKS

Italian Chief's Hint to German Leader Is to 'Go Easy'

London, March 17—Hints have been conveyed to Chancellor Hitler of Germany from Premier Mussolini to "go easy" on Nazi violence and to restrain his storm troops from attacking Jews, it is said in an important London quarter.

While glad to see another naton experiment with a Fascist form of government, Il Duce is said to have explained that he recognizes a difference between Italian Fascism and Nazi Fascism, which contain a many elements clashing with the picture of an ideal Fascist state.

Hitler, personally, feels the Nazi attacks on Jews have been ill-advised and has declared his intention to punish any troopers furthering anti-Jewish violence.

Mussolini, it is understood, is eagerly awaiting his week-end talks with Premier MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Simon of Britain, having expressed a genuine desire to maintain peace in Europe. He firmly believes Europe imperils her future by dividing into opposing camps.

He feels France should take a more friendly attitude, is said to be willing even to accept some inequality in the Mediterranean in return for some naval concession by Paris.

France, however, still holds her stubborn attitude, but it is hoped this can be eased by the MacDonald-Mussolini talks.

Italy is opposed to any mediterranean pact suggested by France as inadequate if the real naval problems of the countries are to be solved. England and Italy are said to be in agreement on many points here.

U. S., Italy and Britain in Accord on Arms

Rome, March 17 (INS)—Solidarity of viewpoint on the disarmament conference between Italy, Britain and the United States is the interpretation placed by Fascist spokesmen today on the forthcoming conference between Premier Mussolini, Prime Minister MacDonald and Sir John Simon, British Foreign Minister.

The three will discuss the difficulties of the disarmament conference, especially the arms reduction proposal advanced in Geneva by MacDonald yesterday, according to reliable information here.

The conference is hailed as presaging defeat of France in what are termed her efforts to bring about isolation of Fascist Italy and Hitler-dominated Germany.

RAIN DRENCHES QUAKE VICTIMS

Long Beach, Cal., March 17 (AP)—A drizzling rain today added to the misery of the thousands of homeless in the quake-stricken Long Beach area. Although shelter was found for all during the night, there was no heat in the buildings, as the city is without a gas supply.

Pasadena seismologists have announced the origin of last Friday's devastating shock was below the floor of the Pacific Ocean, six miles or more off the mouth of the Sanat Ana river and approximately 18 miles south of Long Beach.

CHINESE PLANES BOMBING JAPS

Tokio, March 17 (AP)—Heavy punishment by bombing planes of Chinese troops attacking the Japanese positions at Hsinfenkow, most important pass in the central section of the great wall along the Jehol border, was reported today in Japanese dispatches.

A crew of five Japanese aviators were feared lost when one of the bombing planes failed to return to the military base at Chinchow, Manchuria, near the Eeastern Jehol frontier.

Large Chinese concentrations were trying repeatedly to recapture Hsifenkow, Japanese sources said. The Japanese brigade under Maj.-Gen. Heijiro Hattori, which worked its way southward from Lingyuan, Jehol, to seize the wall passages in that area, has encountered considerable heavy fighting in the past week.

Simon P. Greenleaf, 30, of Barnstable, Mass., pleaded nolo to a similar charge and was placed on probation.

ROOSEVELT TO SIGN ECONOMY BILL TODAY

Makes President Dictator Over Vets and U. S. Pay

Washington, March 17 (US)—The $500,000,000 economy bill, making President Roosevelt a virtual dictator over veterans' compensation and federal salaries, was scheduled to become law today.

Only the fact that the House, after approving all Senate amendments, adjourned yesterday before Speaker Rainey was able to sign an engrossed copy, prevented the measure from being enacted at that time. It will be sent to the White House today, however, and the President is expected to affix his signature immediately.

The House vote approving the Senate amendments was 374 to 19. Last Saturday the bill was passed 266 to 138, after an angry debate.

MANY VOTES SWITCHED

House members switched by the dozens yesterday, some on the theory that Senate amendments had liberalized the measures, others because of the insistent public opinion to "stand by the President."

The President shortly will issue orders lopping off expenditures for war veterans and slashing the pay of federal employes.

Through a sweeping revision of the veterans' compensation, savings to the taxpayers totaling about $400,000,000 was the goal. Another $100,000,000 was estimated from federal pay reductions.

Under the bill a maximum pay cut of 15 per cent may be made by a Presidential order. The furlough system is abandoned. Periodical revision of the pay of federal employes, based upon the lowered cost of living compared with 1928 is left to the chief executive.

DRASTIC ACTION IN 6 DAYS

He may reduce the pay, but not raise it above the present level should there be a sudden spurt in the cost of living above the 1928 level.

Thus, within six legislative days Congress put through one of the most drastic grants of power to the President it ever passed in peace time. Last Friday President Roosevelt asked for this authority and congressional committees broke records for expeditious action.

Exactly as requested by the President, the House passed the bill Saturday, while the Senate consumed three days to make 40 amendments, most of them for clarification. The "money" amendments lopped off only about $25,000,000 of the savings sought in the original bill.

TOWN MOURNS DR. JOHNSON

Flags were at half staff in Winthrop today as evidence of the community's grief at the death of Dr. Orville E. Johnson, 66, dean of Winthrop physicians, who died yesterday following a brief illness.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon in Winthrop Center Methodist Episcopal Church. Dr. Johnson was an active Mason, and vice-president of the Winthrop Savings Bank.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edith Allen Johnson; a son, Thurston Johnson of Providence, and a daughter, Miss Gladys Johnson of Winthrop.

San Francisco, March 17—Speaking on "Education and the Social Order," Dr. Alexander Meikeljohn, former president of Amherst College, told members of the Commonwealth Club, here:

"We teachers can't carry on our work in the colleges as we want unless there is a change in the social order that comes pretty near a revolution. The few students at our universities that get something out of it find themselves on leaving college in a world in which they do not belong."

Savoldi, Former Grid Star, Sued for Divorce

Daisy Savoldi

Los Angeles, March 17 — Daisy Florence Savoldi, wife of Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star and now a professional wrestler, has brought suit for divorce against him in Superior Court it was revealed today.

Savoldi, his wife says, may have been an All-American football player but he was not an All-American husband.

For weeks the only way she knew of his whereabouts was by reading the sports page accounts of his wrestling bouts, she charged.

Colleen Moore Fights Auto Crash Suit

Colleen Moore

Los Angeles, March 17—Colleen Moore, film star, is to appear in court today to defend herself against a suit for $100,000 damages brought by Mrs. Clara B. DeCan. Miss Moore's chauffeur, K. Fujita, is also named in the suit as defendant.

The plaintiff alleges that she was run down by the actress' car and that her injuries proved to be serious. The case is scheduled to come up for trial today and according to friends of Miss Moore, the actress intends to be on hand.

HOUSE SPEEDS FARM BILL

duction during the current year by renting land and allowing it to lie idle or diverting it into other production.

Extraordinary powers are given the Secretary of Agriculture to administer the act and to fix the tax which shall be collected.

The bill is intended to raise the price of agricultural commodities to a point where a bushel of wheat will buy as much now as it did in the years 1909 to 1914.

The Smith cotton bill, which was "pocket vetoed" by President Hoover, is included.

Under this bill, the cotton now owned by the government and co-operatives would be pooled. A farmer would be given option to buy a portion of the cotton if he agreed to cut his own production 30 per cent. He could sell the cotton later at a profit if, as is expected, the reduction of production would boost the price.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace explained that a different system may be applied to each product. Payment to the farmer of money for the retirement of land from corn production may be made contingent upon a reduction in the number of hogn marketed.

The Secretary can, if he desires, rent land from individual farmers or allot sums for land rentals to states and counties.

TROOPERS' FIRST RAID UNDER NEEDHAM

State troopers are shown removing part of the $200,000 seizure of choice liquors seized in a raid on a farmhouse in Norton, near the Taunton line, when four men were arrested. It was the first liquor raid made by the troopers since Brig.-Gen. Needham took office as Massachusetts' commissioner of public safety. The state police are under his control. NEEDHAM INAUGURATES TROOP RULE WITH $200,000 RUM RAID

FOUR ARRESTED IN NORTON SEIZURE

New Leader Brings Peace With Motor Head on First Day

A $200,000 liquor seizure in Norton, one of the largest ever made in the history of the State police, marked the beginning of the new deal in the State patrol under its new leader, Brig.-Gen. Daniel Needham.

Troopers from the Rehoboth barracks, aided by a Seekonk constable, made the seizure late yesterday when they visoted the farm of Manuel Arruda, in Washington st., Norton. Some 4000 cases of choice mixed liquors were uncovered. Four men arrested will be arraigned in Taunton court today.

PEASE IN OFFICE

The seizure came on the heels of an assertion by the new commissioner that he would not be satisfield with anyone's conclusions and that h e"wanted the facts."

He referred to the so-called investigations and the "comic opera" court martial of Capt. Charles T. Beaupre by a board of his subordinates in which the capt was "whitewashed" on numerous charges revealed by the Boston Evening Amrican over a period of several months.

Yesterday was a busy day for the new commissioner of public safety in his first day of office. It was also a day of results with evidence in every action taken of the "new dal" which is expected to restore the state patrol to its former enviable position in the law enforcing activities of the Commonwealth.

BEAUPRE CASE REOPENED

Prominent in the day's work was the restoration of friendly relations between the state patrol and registry of motor vehicles. It has been an open secret for the past several years that the two departments were practically at swords points. The feeling culminated with the declaration of Registrar Morgan Ryan Wednesday that he did not care to have his department lowered by association with the state police.

This is at an end now. Yesterday Commr. Needham conferred with Registrar Ryan. At the end it was announced that a co-operative arrangement had been made and that there would be no more friction.

Gen. Needham also made t plain that the case of Capt. Beaupre would be thoroughly sifted. With that en din view he conferred at length yesterday with State Auditor Francis X. Hurley. Auditor Hurley and the general will meet again Monday at which time the new commissioner will receive documentary evidence from Hurley of all the facts in his possession.

Gen. Needham also said he would confer with Charles P. Howard of the commission of administration and finance, and Capt. Thomas E. Bligh, who headed the board which conducted a "star-chamber" inquiry into the charges against Capt. Beaupre previous to the appointment of a trial board of his subordinates.

FACES HEAVY TASK

It was learned that Gen. Needham will investigate particularly the evidence which was ruled out of the "comic-opera" court martial by the rule of limitations.

While giving every intention of furnishing the department with a "new deal" Gen. Needham revealed that he had no illusions about the task confronting him.

McCORMACK FOR STRONG BEER

Washington, March 17 (AP)—Rep. McCormack, D., of Mass., chairman of the House subcommittee which drafted the beer bill, voiced his opposition to Senate action which lowered the alcoholic content from 3.2 to 3.05.

"I am opposed to it," said McCormack, "and wil lmake every effort to prevent concurrence.

"It's hard to understand why a man would vote for one and not for the other.

"What the American people want is palatable beer. The difference between 3. 2per cent and 3.05 is ohe difference between a palatable and an unpalatable glass."

He said he was not disposed to object to the inclusion of wine in the bill, another Senate amendment.

Everett Police on Edge of Blast

Several souvenirs of the World War, including some loaded shells, were turned over by Everett police to Capt. Van Amburgh of the state explosive department. They were found in some rubbish in the basement of the police station when it was cleaned out on orders of Chief George O. Kenney.

The souvenirs had been forgotten. Police say there was sufficient explosives in the shells to have blown the police headquarters building to atoms.

SORT BOTTLES- PREPARING FOR 3.2 BREW

Boston prepares to bottle beer, barrel beer, for immediate delivery and shipment. The 3.2 variety will go out as a substitute to near beer. Thousands of men will be put to work, and millions of dollars will pass into the tax offices of states and the nation. At the top you see William Foodel, as he throws hops into a massive copper kettle. This is the first step in beer making. Then we come to the fermentation vat, which contains 317 barrels of fluid. Herman Ziener of the Commerical Brewing Co., Charlestown, is working with his weight gauge. In the Haffenreffer Brewing Co., in Roxbury, the photographer took one shot of a portion of the 200,000 of empty bottle cases. There are 24 bottles to the case, and each of these holding 12 fluid ounces. They are ready for the word to bottle and sell. At the same brewing warehouse in Roxbury, the photographer found men sorting bottles that are ready for the rush that will be caused when the nation and state decide how beer shall be made and sold. $50,000 POLO ASSAULT SUIT NEARS END

Society Crowd Present to Hear Defense of Banker Prince

Trial of the now famous $50,000 assault suit of Arthur Mason, of Hamilton, against Frederick Prince, Boston banker, may be concluded today, in Salem court.

Prince himself, who has not yet appeared at the hearing of the suit in which Mason alleges the Boston banker struck him on the head with a polo mallet in a game at the Myopia Hunt Club, is expected to be in court today to testify in his own defense.

ELEONORA SEARS PRESENT

Mrs. Prince, who also has not yet appeared in court, is also expected to be on hand to testify. A large gathering of society folk, who have followed the case with interest during its prolonged sessions before U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr, who is sitting as auditor, will be on hand again today. Led by Eleonora Sears, famous horsewoman, a large group was on hand yesterday.

Testimony yesterday afternoon was confined to that offered by Joshua Crane, polo expert, who admitted on the stand that Prince had paid his expenses from England to have his testimony presented in the case.

Despite this expense, Crane's testimony was limited to a scant half-dozen remarks. Prince's attorney asked Crane if he had experienced the effect of having a horse come into him in an attempt to "ride him off." Crane replied in the affirmative and was asked if a horse's head was padded by nature.

SOLID IVORY HEAD

When objection was made, Prince's counsel, James W. Sullivan, declared he meant to bring out that a horse's head was what would be referred to in humans as "solid ivory." After this all questions by Sullivan met with a series of objections by Atty. Samuel Batchelder, counsel for Mason.

Under cross-examination Crane admitted he had come from England, where he has been living for the past few years, principally to testify in the case.

MME. LUPESCU WOUNDED

London, March 17 (US) Mme. Magda Lupescu, red-haired companion of King Carol of Rumania, was shot and slightly wounded in Bucharest late yesterday, according to Paris dispatches received here.

Mme. Lupescu, a Jewess, was said to have been leaving her home to visit a hair-dresser when Jon Vargo, an anti-Semitist, fired two revolver shots at her. One shot hit the king's favorite in the shoulder.

Vargo, the dispatch stated, was overpowered by Lupescu's chauffeur and another attendant.

Word of the attack on Mme. Lupescu, who was recently reported to have borne a son, leaked out when a coded telegram addressed to an ex-cabinet minister in Paris, who revealed the story to the London Daily Express.

Poker O. K. but Not as a Weapon

Poker is all right if it's a game and the ante is only a penny. But poker, an iron instrument for poking the fire, is cause for divorce when a husband heats it before poking his wife with it.

Mrs. Marcia Swann of Malden was granted a divorce from Elmer R. Swann, a salesman, after she described to Judge Campbell, in Middlesex court, how her husband branded her one day with a hot iron. He also ran around with a "sporting and drinking crowd," she said.

East Boston Death Trial Goes Over

Hearing on the case of Michael Santeniello, 42, of East Boston, charged with murder of Pasquale Cicarelli and Giacomo Biancarri in his grocery store at Brooks and Trenton sts., East Boston, last February 22, has been continued to March 23.

The hearing was opened in East Boston district court yesterday. Santeniello charges the pair he shot were trying to extort money from him.

Desertion 43 Years Ago Frees Husband

James W. Searles of South Ashburnham, who claims his wife deserted him 43 years ago, is a free man again today. He was granted a divorce yesterday by Judge Frederick H. Chamberlain in Worcester Probate Court.

Searles testified that his wife, Mrs. Bessie E. Searles of East Princeton, left him for another man in 1890. The couple were married in Barre in June, 1862.

NURSE CALLED IN POISON MYSTERY

Miss Lee Faces Arrest, Cregg Says, Unless She Appears

The special session of the Essex County Grand Jury, convened in Salem to hear details of the mysterious death of Fire Capt. William J. Costello of Peabody is expected to report late today.

County officials admitted that any indictments returned would be secret. The jurors, on completing their deliberations, are scheduled to make an immediate report of Judge Wilford D. Gray.

Chief among the witnesses to be heard today by the jury was reserve Patrolmana Edward J. McMahon of the Peabody police. He testified yesterday but it was learned that he had not completed his story.

He was an intimate friend of the Costello family and is said to have been one of the first called to the house by Mrs. Costello after she found her husband dead in the second floor hallway of their home.

Another witness today is expected to be Miss Dorothy Lee, who ignored a summons to appear yesterday. Authorities said last night she would be arrested today if she continued to ignore the summons.

Miss Lee acted as nurse to the late Mrs. Andrew Fyfe, mother of the fire captain's widow. Questioned a week ago she said she had never heard of the combination of cyanide and oxalic acid used as a cleansing agent in Mrs. Fyfe's home. Mrs. Costello said her mother often used it.

Other witnesses who will appear today include an array of medical experts, who will testify concerning the cyanide which killed Costello and the approximate hour of death.

These include Dr. George Burgess McGrath, Suffolk County medical examiner; Dr. J. Stewart Rooney, Boston toxicologist; Dr. John F. Walsh, who was called to the Costello home when the body was found, and Dr. S. Chase Tucker, Peabody medical examiner.

Bridge or His Home Brew Split Couple

John H. Fitzpatrick of Cambridge is quite certain the home brew he makes never has a kick to it. "Because I don't put any hops in it when I make it," he told Judge Campbell in Middlesex Court, where his wife, Florence, sought separate support.

Mrs. Fitz patrick had previously testified that the stuff he drank made him try to climb up walls like a fly. Fitzpatrick said it wasn't home brew, but bridge, that caused all the trouble.

Whether it was Mrs. Fitzpatrick's addiction to bridge, or her husband's fondness for home brew that brought on domestic discord, Judge Campbell will determine, after a study of the testimony.

7 MALDEN GIRLS IN 'SPEAK' RAID

Nineteen youthful hearts, seven of them feminine—beat a bit faster today, apprehensive lest Malden police reveal the names of their owners found in a raided speakeasy and gambling den.

The seven girls and 12 boys were nibbling pretzels and drinking beer when police raiders descended on an apartment in Henry st.

They stood demurely by as Lieut. Frank E. Linehan wrote their names in a little book and then sent them home. The officer would not reveal the names but intimated that they read like a page from the Malden social directory.

The raiders seized 100 gallons of alleged beer, gaming implements, a bar and decorations. Augustus Campelli, proprietor of the resort was arrested.

Brewers for 5 Cents a Schooner Beer

Rochester N. Y., March 17—(AP)—A nickel a schooner, Rochester brewers have agreed, is a fair price for beer.

Two breweries—the American and the Genesee—have plenty of the brew on tap and will be rivals in getting the first trucklod on the street. A third, the Standard Brewery, will be ready in six weeks.

COURT HEARS OF "MAGIC"

MADAME WALTON MRS. PIKE

Magic numbers. Weird predictions. Alleged influence of a numerologist. These three and many more "disturbing influences," were mentioned in Dedham Probate Court yesterday where it was sought to have a guardian and conservator appointed over the estate of Mrs. Helen M. Pike, a wealthy Brookline widow. The photograph shows Madame Effie I. Walton, numerologist, at left, and Mrs. Pike. Mrs. Gertrude E. Perkins, a sister of Mrs. Pike, with a hired detective, sought to prove that Madame Walton had undue influence over Mrs. Pike and that the numerologist was to be the sole benefactor in case of the death of Mrs. Pike. HAS $20,000, HELD IN HOLDUP

Frank Costello, 31, a carpenter with $20,000 in the bank, will have to face a $24 holdup charge in Roxbury court today, even though police are convinced he is innocent. Costello was identified by [illegible] Cardone, owner of a store on Ruggles st., Roxbury, as the man who stuck him up and took $24 from the cash register yesterday afternoon. Two customers agreed with Cardone that Costello looked like the bandit.

Costello, who lives on Union st., South End, is known as a man of fine character. He pointed out to police that he had no gun on him, although he was arrested a few minutes after the holdup. But with three men identifying him as a bandit, he must prove himself innocent today.

'Two Gun' Resting Easy Again

Patrolman James H. (Two-Gun) Baker, former terror of Southern Artery traffic violators, got a slight jolt when he appeared at rollcall at Quincy headquarters last night. The desk lieutenant suddenly announced that there was a reward for the apprehension of James H. Baker.

"Two-Gun" stalked up to the desk, where he was informed that the Baker sought was wanted in Phoenix, Ari., for violation of the traffic laws. He breathed a sigh of relief since he hasn't been in Arizona for years, and anyway traffic laws are the last things he would violate.

Closed Door for All but Four at Sullivan's This 17th

For years Frank A. Sullivan and his family have celebrated St. Patrick's Day by holding "open house" at their Draper st. home in Dorchester, but today things will be a bit different in the Sullivan home.

"Pa Sullivan" has ruled that relatives and friends will be barred from the house this year, and when "Pa" makes a ruling it sticks. Sullivan, a sanitary inspector for the city, regards today as something more than St. Patrick's Day and Evacuation Day.

In keeping with the economy program, Sullivan thought it would be a good idea to celebrate the birthdays of four of his children, which all fall in the month of March, as does his own, which is today.

Virginia and Florence, twins, are 11; Gerald is 16, and Brendan, 8. Two other children, whose birthdays have already taken place this year, Gustin, 17, and Mary, 14, will be present at the celebration. The line for others has been drawn with the announcement by Sullivan that only the immediate friends of a family will be present.

Distillery Fades as Beer Returns

Just as the beer bill and anti-prohibition legislation is uppermost the work of completing demolition of the Everett distillery on Chelsea st. is being finished. The copper vessels bought in Medford in which Medford rum was originally made, have been sold to a junk dealer.

The largest platform elevator in the world was also located in the plant and is dismantled. The company has been making commercial alcohol in the past few years.

FOUR-DAY FETE UNDERWAY IN 'SOUTHIE'

Parade, Feature of Celebration, to Be Held Tomorrow

The top of the mornin' to you.

This is the greeting today of all Boston and particularly of one section, South Boston, which can combine its celebration of Evacuation Day with the feast of himself, the Good Saint Patrick, who drove every snake from the green isle and changed them into prohibition agents or something.

THE DAY OF DAYS

Today is South Boston's day of days. It will be slightly different from the usual run of celebrations. But it will be no less festive. Usually the whole business is crammed into one day. But this year it will be stretched out to cover practicaly four days.

As usual the celebration started last night with the big "night-before" banquet. Today it will continue with the usual "open house" and the St. Patrick's Day activities.

The usual Evacuation Day parade will not be held until tomorrow. Open house will again be held all day tomorrow. The festivities will close Sunday with the annual historical exercises, which will be held in the Broadway Theater.

The entire South Boston district is alive with color. Mingled with the Stars and Stripes and the red white and blue of the national colors are the green, white and orange of the Irish Free State flag. Public and parochial schools in the district are closed today in honor of the holiday.

Principal features for today are devoted to the children of the district. There will be shows at the two theaters of the district for all the children of the section.

During the evening both in South Boston and other sections of the city, observances will be held by Irish societies.

CURLEY, ELY SPEAK

All preparations for the big parade tomorrow, to celebrate the 157th anniversary of the evacuation of Boston by the British have been completed. Those taking part are now hopeful only that fair weather will be accorded to them.

The annual "night-before" dinner at Hotel Bradford last night was a huge success. Gov. Ely and Mayor Curley were among the principal speakers. Both spoke of the near approach of beer, the beverage which made many a St. Patrick's Day an event to be remembered in "Southie."

Driver Cleared in Death of Boy

Walter Brozink, 9, was killed in Peabody under the wheels of a heavy truck from which, police said, he fell. The driver, unaware of the accident, was held blameless by the authorities.

STATE CLOSES SOON IN TRIAL OF GUSTINS

The government is expected to end its case today in the trial of Thomas P. Dineen of Dorchester, and Anthony Dembrowski of South Boston, both charged with assault with intent to murder Special Officer Daniel McDonald, in January.

McDonald was found unconscious in a South Boston field, near Congress st. bridge, by brother officers and, for several days, was near death.

Thomas G. Curran, caretaker of the Gustin Club, South Boston, headquarters of Boston's most notorious gang, where the alleged assault on McDonald took place, turned state's evidence yesterday.

Curran described how McDonald had been drugged, beaten and kicked down stairs. He said Steve Wallace, alias Gustin, ordered Dembrowski to give McDonald a drink that caused the officer to become unconscious. He said Wallace and Dineen then kicked McDonald down a flight of stairs.

WALKER FILES DIVORCE REPLY

Miami, Fla., March 17 (AP)—James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, has filed in Circuit court here a general denial of charges made by his wife, Janet Allen Walker, in her suit for divorce.

Mrs. Walker last week sought dissolution of the marriage on a charge of wilful and continued desertion.

"The defendant denies the allegation in paragraph one of the said bill of complaint," Walker's answer read.

The same denial was made to the two other paragraphs of the complaint.

Walker now is in Cannes, France. His answer was filed by Benjamin Cohen, Miami attorney, who said he acted on cabled instructions.

Cohen attached to Walker's answer a copy of a cablegram from Cannes signed "James J. Walker,' which read: "Enter for me general denial to allegations in divorce suit filed by my wife, anet Allen Walker."

ap Rooms Instead of Bars for Philly

Philadelphia, March 17 (AP)—old-fashioned oak-beamed English tap-rooms may replace the brass rail and mahogany bar of pre-prohibition days in Philadelphia hotels if beer is legalized.

Convinced that the Pennsylvania liquor control bill, now being prepared in the Legislature, will do away with the traditional accoutrements of drinking rooms, local hotelmen are laying elaborate plans to construct tap-rooms in the hostelries.

Many also say they have ordered glasses and steins so that beer may be served immediately if and when the ban is lifted. Several already have placed orders for hundreds of cases of the new brew.

Medford Asks Bus Rate for Children

Efforts are to be made by the Medford city government to have the new bus line established by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway, which now runs from Stoneham sq. to the Spot Pond Zoo, extended into North Medford and to Medford sq. It is probable the city will hold out a contract for transporting school children in that section as an inducement for the extension.

Everett Church Calls Rev. Covell

Rev. Phanuel B. Covell, who has been pastor of the Newton Square Baptist Church at Worcester, has notified the Glendale Baptist Church in Everett that he has accepted the call to the Everett pastorate and will take charge at once.

His acceptance will be formally announced to the church Sunday. He will succeed Rev. Ulysses S. Randall, who resigned to accept a pastorate in the West.

Runaway Girl Is Held for Tests

Caroline Ragusa, 14, of West Second st., South Boston, was under observation at the Psycopathic hospital today. She was removed there after treatment at City hospital. She had been taken to the hospital Tuesday in a hysterical condition, following a ride to Somerville in which she was mysteriously abandoned by her as yet unidentified companions.

Services Held for Sir Henry Thornton

New York, March 17 (AP)—Brief and simple funeral services were conducted today at St. Thomas' chapel for Sir Henry Thornton, veteran railroad executive. Present were many executives from the United States and Canada. Burial was to be in Newtown, Pa.

Armed Pair Bind and Gag Victim

Brockton, March 17—Two armed men held up Joseph Trovose, 22, a cab driver, at gunpoint today and after robbing him of $7, left him gagged and bound. The bandits answer the description of a pair who have robbed two other drivers in the past two weeks.

Settlement of Haverhill Shoe Strike Up to Workers

The two-day strike of 7000 Boston shoe workers ended when all the strikers, with the exception of employes of two out of seventeen shops, returned to work today. Under the terms of settlement, the union was recognized and the matter of wages will be settled by arbitration.

It was predicted by union officials that when the wage scale is finally adjusted, it will set the standard for all New England.

Indications that the strike might spread to Brockton came when a committee claiming to represent over 300 workers called at union headquarters last night and requested that organizers be sent there.

The settlement of the Haverhill strike, where 7500 are still out, is entirely up to the workers. Business Agent Dennis A. Kelleher told Fred I. Cooper, who claims to represent 90 per cent of the manufacturers, that he would have to consult the strikers before agreeing to the proffered terms. Cooper said manufacturers would recognize the union, but would insist the wage schedule be settled by arbitration.

RAID CHARGES BRING DENIAL

Arthur J. Crooks of Medford denied testimony of Wakefield police that he was discovered partly clad in the apartment of Mrs. Mary D. Kinsley of Albion st., Wakefield, named in Mrs. Elizabeth E. Crooks' suit for divorce.

Crooks took the stand in Middlesex court yesterday in contesting his wife's action. He admitted he had gone to Mrs. Kinsley's home several times, but always at the invitation of her son or of her friends.

Judge Beane took the case under advisement.

OFFICERS FACE LIFE IN DEATHS

Bronson, Fla., March 17 (AP)—T. W. Brewer and Thomas Booth, former peace officers, were convicted of murder in the first degree here in connection with the deaths of three Greek sponge fishermen in a jail fire at Cedar Key.

Brewer, former justice of the peace who was removed from office after the discovery of the charred, clubbed and stabbed bodies of the fishermen, and his special constable, Booth, were found guilty by a jury which recommended mercy, automatically fixing the punishment at life imprisonment.

HARVARD STUDENTS VISIT AMERICAN

Members of the class of factory management at Harvard Business School, under the direction of Prof. J. G. Gallan, got a close-up of what it takes to put out a metropolitan daily yesterday. They were photographed in the city room of the Boston Evening American, where Osborn E. Brown, of the promotion department, showed them what was what. The students started from the beginning and were shown the process through which the new passes before you read it in the Evening American. (Boston American Photo.)

HARVARD BOYS TOUR PLANT

Members of the class of factory management of Harvard Business School, under direction of Prof. J. G. Callan, wanted to learn how a modern newspaper was made and so more than 50 of them paid a visit to the Boston Evening American plant yesterday.

Heads of various departments of the Boston American escorted them through the building, explaining every operation in the business of getting out a newspaper.

Mortimer C. Priest, assistant to the publisher of the Boston Evening American and classmate of Prof. Callan at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, explained the business and advertising departments of the paper.

The students, assembled from virtually every state in the Union, and some from foreign countries, were intrigued by the speed and smoothness with which news is gathered like threads from every corner of the globe, sorted, edited and made ready for the printers.

The students saw at first hand how pictures are made, transferred to metal and made ready for printing. Many of them had their first look at a linotype machine, the almost human instrument for casting type.

They stood in awe amid the roar of the most modern presses in the country and saw the latest editions pour out with all the news of the day.

When their inspection was over, they all realized that a modern newspaper and its production deserve the term "miraculous" and all agreed that their trip through the plant was a valuable and impressive experience.

Editor Kills Man Serving Warrant

Medford, Ore., March 17—Lewellyn Alba Banks, one-time millionaire and crusading newspaper editor, shot and killed Constable George Prescott when the officer attempted to serve a warrant for his arrest.

The warrant was based on a grand jury indictment, charging conspiracy in the alleged theft of election ballots.

Garbo to Sail April 1

Stockholm, March 17 (US)—Greta Garbo is going back to Hollywood around April 1, it was learned today.

Democrats the Doctors

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

We sat down today and tried to figure out what would have happened if the banks and the breweries had opened the same day.

All our famous men would have exhausted themselves rushing around making speeches, dedicating cornerstones and launching bottles without the benefit of batleships.

We are glad that things are happening one at a time. Even though they are coming so fast we think they're twins.

We're getting the same kind of action that Colonel Mosebv gave the Union troops. Get there fust with the mostest men and don't take no for an answer.

Congress only squawked on one proposition. Economy. You can't blame them much. The Republicans run up the debts and the Democrats have to take the slash in wages.

It's been that way since we can remember. A Democratic victory means America has called in the doctor.

The G. O. P. starts the stampede and the Democrats undo the damage and tie up the loose ends. Proving that only the game fish swim upstream.

HOOVER LEAVVES FOR HOME

New York, March 17 (AP)—Herbert Hoover is rolling to his home in Palo Alto, Calif., today accompanied by his son, Allan, and Lawrence Richey, his personal secretary, Mr. Hoover left late yesterday on the Broadway Limited of the Pennsylvania system.

The former President, who has been in New York attending to personal business affairs since he arrived from Washington the night of March 4, will stop over today in Chicago and spend the night with friends.

Richey said Mr. Hoover would return to New York within six weeks to two months to wind up his business affairs.

Inside the Pennsylvania Station, a crowd of several hundred persons cheered Mr. Hoover as he stopped to pose for photographers.

The former President talked for a few minutes with Detective George McCartney, of the New York police force, who has served as a guard to him while in New York.

Train Kills Girl

Milton, Vt., March 17 (AP)—Miss Marion Reynolds, 19, was fatally injured here as a Central Vermont railway train crashed into her auto.

BANANA NUT CAKE

Sift 2¼ cups cake flour (measured before sifting) with 2½ teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt. Sift again twice. Cream ½ cup butter with 1 cup sugar until the sugar crystals have disappeared and the mixture is fluffy. Add 2 well-beaten eggs. Then add the sifted flour alternately with ⅔ cup of milk. Beat until smooth, add 1 teaspoon vanilla and bake in 2 well-greased 9-inch layer cake pans at 375 (moderate heat) for about 25 minutes. When cool, cover the bottom layer with sliced bananas. Pour over this a seven-minute frosting. To make this:

Put 2 unbeaten egg whites, 1½ cups brown sugar, packed firm, a dash of salt, 5 tablespoons water in the top of a double boiler. Beat with egg beater until well mixed and the sugar crystals are dissolved. Place over boiling water and beat constantly with egg beater for 7 minutes or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from fire and add 1 teaspoon of vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread on the cake. Put on the second layer and cover the top and sides of the cake with the rest of the frosting and sprinkle with cocoanut (moist) or chopped walnut meats.

DATE PAN DOWDY

SAUCE:
3 cups boiling water
1 cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon butter

Place three ingredients in a square cake pan. Stir until sugar is dissolved, then boil gently for 30 minutes.

BATTER:
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup dates
½ cup nut meats
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup milk.

Cream butter and sugar, add vanilla, sliced dates and chopped nuts. Sift baking powder, salt and cinnamon with the flour. Add dry ingredients alternately with the milk to first mixture. Drop the batter by spoonfuls into the syrup in the cake pan. Bake in a moderate oven 35 to 40 minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot with the syrup from the pan as sauce.

CREPES SUZETTE
(Tea Delicacies)

1 cup flour
1 cup powdered sugar
2 eggs
1 cup milk
flavoring
a pinch salt

Mix together the flour, salt and sugar. Add the milk slowly, forming a thick paste. Add the well beaten eggs and mix thoroughly. Add flavoring as grated lemon or orange peel. Fry on a hot, buttered griddle, making the cakes very thin and frying them until almost crisp, but just soft enough to roll.

Prepare the following sauce:
1 tangerine
3 tablespoons butter
½ cup powdered sugar

Cream the butter and add the sugar gradually, creaming them together. Add the grated rind of the tangerine and the juice drop by drop, stirring while it is added so that the sauce does not curdle. Spread a spoonful of this sauce over each pancake just before it is rolled to be served.

SCOTCH BROTH

2 large carrots
1 medium size potato
1 onion
Celery tops
½ tablespoon salt
½ cup oatmeal (scant)
2 tablespoons barley
1½ quarts boiling water
1 can tomato soup

Put all raw vegetables through the meat grinder. Add oatmeal, barley and all ground vegetables to the boiling salted water. Let it boil gently for two hours or until vegetables are very soft and soup becomes thick. Stir occasionally to prevent soup catching to bottom of pot. Before removing from fire add can of tomato soup.

PRUDENCE
READY TO BROWN
Corned Beef Hash
ACCEPTED
AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSN.

No wonder folks are going back to GOOD OLD-FASHIONED GRUB

SURE, some of the fancy new dishes are all right but they can't take the place these days of plain, hearty food, cooked the good, old-fashioned way.

Any man, woman or kid who ever tasted hash made by the old New England recipe, relishes Prudence Corned Beef Hash like a new-found friend, with a thrill that is gratifying to see.

Piping hot, savory, crusted a golden brown, Prudence Hash wins you before the first bite and continues to satisfy every whim of appetite, every need of nourishment.

Only young, tender beef is used—no scraps, no skin, no gristle. Mealy, white potatoes are boiled in the same water as the meat; but separately, after the meat has been removed and the pot skimmed of fat. You've simply got to taste some Prudence Hash to realize the difference.

Costly? We should say not!—a big, husky serving for six cents. Hard to prepare? Why, all you do is open the can and brown the hash in a frying pan; takes three minutes.

Maybe you have never tasted good, old-fashioned corned beef hash. Well, there's a treat waiting for you at just about every grocery store.

Only, remember this: There's as much difference in brands of hash as there is in kinds of people; so be sure you get Prudence.

GREATEST NAVY IS PROGRAM OF ROOSEVELT

Washington, March 17 — A vast program of new construction for the navy's air forces, to make that arm the most powerful in the world, is to be included in the eight-year naval building program of President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Swanson, Universal Service learned today.

From high official sources, details of the program were disclosed as follows:

Construction of about 900 airplanes of new and radical design. These include large numbers of a secret new bombing plane, which drops a 2000-pound bomb or torpedo with deadly accuracy while going at a speed of 350 miles an hour.

Construction of two aircraft carriers of 20,000 tons each, carrying about 150 planes, and a third carrier of 15,000 tons with about 115 planes.

Construction of eight modified aircraft carriers, or "flying deck cruisers," with 36 planes each, radically different from any type of ship ever attempted by any navy.

Details of the flying deck cruisers, heretofore guarded with the utmost secrecy, were divulged to Universal Service for the first time. On a low forward deck they will carry nine six-inch guns in three turrets of graduated height, arranged one behind the other.

Science Approves Ancient Hatred of Night Air

By GILBERT SELDES

Gilbert Seldes

For 10 years I have waited and now that it has come I am as happy as if I had found money. I have found a great scientist who sleeps with his windows closed. He is J. B. S. Haldane, certainly one of the most intelligent Englishmen alive, a destroyer of superstitions, a man who experiments and observes—the very opposite of the booboisie of H. L. Mencken, the last man to subscribe to The American Credo of absurdities listed by George Jean Nathan. In his new book, "Science and Human Life" (which, by the way, is vastly entertaining, and stimulating), Mr. Haldane says: "I was brought up to sleep with the window open and had about a cold a month. Since I married my bedroom window is shut in cold weather and I only get about two colds a year." Elsewhere Mr. Haldane speaks highly of marriage (another bourgeois superstition) and particularly of his wife; so we may assume that shutting out the cold night air is one of the pleasures of life he owes to the woman he married. And we who have been a little annoyed by the sweeping declarations of superior people owe her a great deal, too. If enough scientists marry we may discover that the earth is flat, after all.

Mr. Haldane does not recommend nailing down your windows. "When a number of people sleep in one room the windows must be kept open," he says. Unlike the superior dogmatists, he lays down no rules for others. He knows what suits himself, and if anyone does not like a whiskey and soda before going to bed (in a room with closed windows) Mr. Haldane does not insist. He himself is poisoned by certain temperance drinks; he studies the biological effects of taxing salt and prohibiting beer. But he does not insist. He only says, "except in overcrowded sleeping quarers or in hot weather I do not believe in open windows at night."

The "fresh air fad" is comparatively recent. Yet the absolute goodness of night air has become a revered item in the super-American credo, the dogmas of those who despite the ignorant majority. Most of us can remember the pitying sentences with which our poor grandfathers were dismissed in books on hygiene. "They thought that the night air brought malaria," or "it was believed that windows in bedrooms must be closed at night to keep out the poisonous night air." And now Mr. Haldane, as clear-sighted and authoritative a scientist as you can find, is closing his windows.

What About Sun?

The admirers of air at night never did come to terms with the sun worshipers. (I feel this deeply myself because I belong to both camps: I like cold rooms, fresh air and heavy quilts at night and I give my unqualified approval to the sun as an institution and wish there were more of it. Yet I feel that a flaw in the argument exists, as if I ought to choose between them). If the sun is so curative, if it destroys germs, then the hours between our snatches of sunlight must be filled with air which is either useless or as Mr. Haldane seems to think, definitely not beneficial to us.

The particular case is not so important as the general case: the supposed superstitions of our elders return with the guarded blessing of science. I should like men in laboratories to work on rheumatism and discover the excellent properties of a potato carried in the back pocket. Or an examination might be made of the virtues of a steel ring around the fourth finger—I have forgotten for what ill it was supposed to serve. Remembering that not one in a million of us has ever privately seen any proof that the earth is round, I should like a scientific suggestion that it may be cylindrical, if not flat. From that we may proceed to the noble notion that whipping children is good—for parents if not for children.

Mr. Haldane notes in another passage the difference between the work of Pasteur and that of Darwin. If Pasteur's ideas were discarded (by such legislators, for instance, as discarded the teachings of Darwin in Tennessee) that death rate in any community would double. But "no obvious disaster" would follow the rejection of Darwinism, which so far "has only led to a change in fashionable beliefs which may not be permanent."

I thank Mr. Haldane for the word "fashionable," even more than for the suggestion that Darwinism may not be the final word. For I have long held that the educated minority and the superior few are as much swayed by fads in ideas as the mob and are as easy prey to superstition.

BACK TO GOOD OLD DAYS

Here are York and King, in all their regal old-fashioned splendor, anticipating the arrival of beer. Chick York and Rose King, headliners at RKO Keith's Theater this week, have made the old-fashioned tin-type famous for the past dozen years or more. This picture sure brings us back to the "good old days" all right.

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Diary of a Colyumist's Dawg!

(A few more extracts therefrom)

March 4—The more I see of this guy the pretty lady calls Louie the goofier I think he is. Today he came out of his bedroom and tinkered around with that queer little box until suddenly a voice came out. "Keep quiet," yelled Louie. "Good godawmighty, can't a fellow listen to a speech without all that noise!" Lee says to him, "Don't fly off like that. You can read about it in the papers tomorrow," and he says, "That's just like a woman Don't you know this is history—right now we're naving some history going on. Now quiet down and let me hear what Roosevelt's got to say." Well, she giggled, and he got madder and ran upstairs where there's another one of the funny boxes, so I followed him up and listened with him.

March 6.—Today he was reading one of those papers he calls a tab and suddenly he lets out a yell and he screams, "Well, lookahere, just lookahere. He's always squawking I use his lines and looka! He's got four I used last week. Four—I'm gonna ring them and send them to him like he does to me." Lee laughed out loud. "Aren't you a baby?" she cries. "What's the difference?" He glared at her. "You're always sticking up for everybody else except me. Why don't you stick up for me once in a while—you don't even read me any more." Well, Lee laughed louder than ever when he said that and he got sorer and sorer and when she says, "What's the use. You tell it all to me before you write it anyway," he hits the ceiling and yells, "Annie, get me my breakfast and let me get out of this house before I go nuts." He doesn't say anymore until just before he leaves and then he growls, "From now on, believe me, I keep everything to myself." So Lee laughs all over again and says, "So I see—judging by your column!" and he bangs the door. The guy's a lunatic.

March 9—That fellow they call Roosevelt must have done something that's got Louie worried. He keeps saying, "If the bank doesn't hurry up and open we're not going to eat. I've only got a dollar left." Natalie comes up to him and says, "Daddy, I've simply got to have $6 to pay up for my lunches and you haven't paid me last week's allowance." Well, I thought he was fit to be tied.

March 10—Mr. Lewis, who double-crossed me by selling me to this crazy household, came over to see me today for the first time. I ran over and jumped at him and he says, "What do you call him?" Lee says, "Whiskey" and he laughs. He says that's a funny name for a thorough aristocrat; his grandpappy'd turn over in his grave if he knew it. Lee says, "I don't know what to do with him. He tears up all the plants and look what he's done to his overcoat." Mr. Lewis says, "He's spoiled. You're not using discipline. Get down Whiskey." Then he looks me over and he says, "He's not as good looking as I thought he'd be. He's too wild. Use a strap on him once in a while. How are his house manners?" Lee says, "For an aristocrat, he's very thoughtless and careless" and Mr. Lewis says, "Well, any time you want me to take him back Ill be glad to. His brother is much better looking and better behaved," and just then Natalie comes in and says, "Mother, don't you dare give my Whiskey away. I love him just as he is. I think he's very beautiful. I don't want a dog that behaves like a sissy." When Louie got home that night, Lee says to him, "Mr. Lewis says Whiskey's got bad manners and he'll be glad to take him back." Louie growls, "Oh for gosh sake, don't bother me about that mutt! Did you read my column today?" So Lee got peeved and says, "Heavens, the banks are closed, we've got no money home, Whiskey's ruined the rug upstairs, you haven't paid this month's rent, I haven't a decent thing to wear and all you can think about is your column. You make me sick."

March 13—They went out last night with a crowd of people and got in about 3 o'clock in the morning and woke me up. Louis was feeling pretty gay, talking all the time, and Lee says, "Heavens, I never saw anyone like you. You take two drinks and act like a school girl." He yells, "That's the trouble with you. When I'm quiet you say what's the matter with you—you're like an old man, and when I'm gay you say I'm drunk. What do you expect me to do? I feel good. I'm gonna keep right on feeling good. Whee!"

Stop a COLD the First Day!

Taken Promptly, this Four-Way Remedy Will Usually Stop a Cold the First Day and Save You Much Suffering as Well as the Danger of Serious Complications!

The time to stop a cold is before it gets started. Once a cold fastens itself on you, it becomes twice as hard to remove. And a cold lodged in the system may lead to something worse.

Don't hope to kill a cold with merely local or external applications. A cold is a germ attack, an internal infection and, as such, calls for internal treatment.

Don't hope to kill a cold, either, with anything except a COLD remedy. A cure-all is self-deception. Many preparations which people commonly take for a cold actually make the relief of a cold more difficult because these preparations are constipating and also make the system acid.

The Required Effects

The thing to take for a cold or case of grippe is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine — because it does the four things necessary, in the way that is necessary.

First of all, it opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly — the first step in knocking a cold. Secondly, it kills the cold germs in the system, expels the poisonous infection and reduces the fever. Thirdly, it relieves the headache and that grippy feeling. Fourthly, it tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

This is the treatment a cold calls for and anything less is taking chances.

Harmless, but Effective!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine may be safely taken by young and old and whether you stay indoors or go out. There is no penalty attached to its use. For more than forty years it has been the standard cold and grippe tablet of the world, the formula keeping pace with Modern Medicine. Always ask for it by the full name and look for the letters L B Q stamped on every tablet. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine now comes in two sizes—30c and 50c. Resent a substitute as an attempt to exploit you.

NOTE: During Epidemics a tablet or two of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine every morning and night will do much to fortify your system against infection.

"GULLIVER'S TRAVELS" IN FILMS

Production Will Start Soon as Universal Renews Studio Activities

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1933, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, March 17—Our old friend, Gulliver and his exciting travels, will help solve the problem of better screen entertainment for next season. Universal, in a fantasy modernized sufficiently to meet the 1933 demands, will produce an epic based on the widely read "Gulliver's Travels."

Louella O. Parsons

Please don't think I use the word "epic" lightly or ill-advisedly, for Carl Laemmle, Jr., is completing great plans for "Gulliver" which will go into production as soon as Universal City opens again. A specially constructed steel cage will house the production which, it is estimated, will take at least six to eight months to make. Karl Freund, German genius, responsible for camera effects in "Metropolis," directs.

Back Too Soon

Perhaps Ricardo Cortez should have stayed in the hospital until he was completely well. He worked for a week in "Dead On Arrival" when he had a bad relapse and had to go back to bed. I met him on the street and he looked far from well. He seemed upset over the bank holiday and the 24 hours closing down of the studios. Perhaps that brought about the relapse. At any rate, he was unable to continue his work on "Dead On Arrival." James Dunne was borrowed from the Fox company to replace him.

Important Second Fiddle

Una Merkel is one actress who proves just how important supporting roles can be. She seldom plays a lead, but she always registers and is so important to any picture in which she appears that it doesn't matter if she is playing second fiddle. She and Jean Harlow were a mighty good combination in "The Red-Headed Woman." Una as the beauty parlor pal of the ambitious Jean put over a nice piece of comedy. The two girls will be together again in "Nora," in the same relationship that was such a success in the Katharine Brush story. Gene Markey and John Emerson are working together on the story.

A Fine Gesture

Frederick Beetson, chairman of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, will probably shoot me at sunrise for telling this. But to me it's such a splendid gesture it should not be ignored. At the time the banks closed Fred happened to have $300 in cash in his pocket. He carried $275 of that amount to the Motion Picture Relief Fund, announcing that the sick and poor needed it much more than he did. Thank goodness the salary cuts won't affect the fund. Conrad Nagel, president, has arranged with the studios so that the fund will not suffer from the 50 per cent salary cut given the stars. Each studio has agreed to match dollar for dollar any loss of income that would naturally come through the salary cuts.

Snapshots of Hollywood

FRANK CRAVEN and the MISSUS entertaining MR. AND MRS. GRANTLAND RICE at the fights. WINFIELD SHEEHAN and HERMAN SPITZEL in a front seat. SALLY BLANE, accompanied by the devoted BRUCE CABOT. The EDMUND LOWES, the LIONEL BARRYMORES, the BEN LYONS, the SKEETS GALLAGHERS, among the fight fans at the Olympic Auditorium. Wide difference of opinion on the decision. Most of the film people believing RAMAGE won. The referee called it a draw. SALLY O'NEIL, absent from Hollywood for over a year, lunching at the Vine Street Derby with IVAN KAHN. ADRIENNE AMES sharing MAURICE CHEVALIER'S enthusiasm over BABE LE ROY, buying him toys. MARLENE DIETRICH continuing to carry delicacies to the studio for BRIAN AHERNE. WERA ENGELS and GARY COOPER dining together again. Looks as if he is interested. PEGGY HOPKINS JOYCE sufferirng from a burn she received while curling her hair. Unable to work for a few days. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Harvard Glee Club in Concert

By MOSES SMITH

The concert of the Harvard Glee Club in Symphony Hall last night marked the 75th year of this organization. It would take a historian to trace its probably humble beginnings. Meanwhile, in the more than a decade of Dr. Archibald Davison's direction, the club has become a national institution.

Yet Symphony Hall had as many empty as filled seats last night. The glee club's sudden spurt of fame brought large audiences. More recently its excellence has been taken for granted. People no longer go in numbers to hear wondrously precise presentations of rare and beautiful choral musical. They read about them.

The Glee Club, which for all its precision has not always mustered beautiful tone, was in this respect unusual last night, achieving an unwonted sonority, for example, in excerpts from "Princess Ida" by Gilbert and Sullivan. The high point, artistically, of the concert was the impressive and moving "Dirge for Two Veterans" by Gustav Holst on Walt Whitman's lines. The performance was similarly reverent in spirit.

Nor should one omit mention of the atmospheric quality of Holst's "Hymn to Manas." Two songs by Arensky—"The Steaming Rill" and "Must I Forever"—employed, at least in the arrangement used last night, unusual 'cello obligato, which were finely played by Yves Chardon.

The audience, while cordial, applauded less than the performers deserved.

Theatrical Novelty Opens Monday

Vittorio Podrecca

Vittorio Podrecca, scholar and wizard of stage illusion whose theatrical novelty, "The Piccoli," comes next week to the Plymouth was brought to this country by S. Hurok, who found that 30 countries of the world had seen this Piccoli show and decided that America was to be no stepchild. Signor Podrecca, whose type of theatrical genius is to the marionette art what Max Reinhardt is to the large-scale theater, was predestined for the theater in boyhood when he set up a miniature theater in his father's courtyard in Friuli, near Venice.

He has given a total of 12,000 performances in 4000 cities all over the world.

Beauty Plus

Bobbe Arnst, famous beauty to be seen featured in "Whoopee," on the stage of RKO B. F. Keith's tomorrow. The show is said to be lavish after the manner of the original Ziegfeld production.

Curley on Stage

A number of community theaters are to stage an unusual event. Mayor James M. Curley next Sunday night will make a tour of a number of houses in Roxbury and Dorchester; from the stage of each he will voice a message of confidence and good cheer over the "new deal" administration of President Roosevelt. The theaters to be visited on this first tour are announced as Oriental, Mattapan Square; Codman, Codman square; Dorchester; Strand, Upham's Corner, Dorchester; and the Rivoli, Roxbury.

Charles Sale

"Whisperin' Bill," a one-reel subject starring Charles "Chic" Sale, is an independent production by Ben Bachellor.

St. Patrick Program at Two Theaters

Carl Moore, Ed Jardon, Alice O'Leary, plus the Blue Heaven Orchestra and other entertainers, will be the features of the St. Patrick's Night celebration tonight, at the Egyptian in Brighton and the Central Square in Cambridge.

Vaudeville

Sam Jack Kaufman comes to the RKO Boston today as master of ceremonies. Acts billed in the new vaudeville revue include Kay, Eddie and Ross, The Andresens in "Thrills on a Pole," Steve Evans, "Hollywood's Favorite Mimic."

"VINCENT VENTURES" BOASTS QUALITY

Smart Sketches, Travesties and Dance Numbers Feature of Annual Presentation

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

That excellent band of young women known as the Vincent Club has again assembled its assorted talents in good cause. "Vincent Ventures of 1933" had its premiere at the Wilbur yesterday afternoon and will continue through the week, which really means that the prettiest debutantes, sub-debutantes and even the loveliest of matrons are giving way to mirth and melody and theatrical spectacle to raise new funds for the Vincent Memorial Hospital. It was a gay show, and, even if amateurish in personnel, was far from that in presentation.

Charlotte Lyman

The "Vincent Ventures" was revue lifted to heights no professional producer could afford venture. He might match it in production but the ensembles would ruin him. The youth, beauty and vivacity of "Ventures" are not available except for this annual flight into benevolent gaiety. The program was a series of sketches in groups, dance numbers, and a dash here and there of the solo specialty. Of the latter there were several satisfying examples of rich theatrical talent coaxed from obscure places. Nancy Whitman was one of these spotless performers. In two numbers she revealed that true artisty is not always professional. Her first number, "No Clown! No Cavalier," tickled the audience; her second was a tap dance that could not have been excelled. These Vincent Club members, it seems, mix their social exercises with refined acrobatics. For, included in the day's best and certainly most lively numbers were dance contributions by Charlotte Lyman and Alice Ellsworth.

To descend to the vernacular, tipping a Vincent Club audience on its ears has become something of a habit with Miss Lyman. She did it last year; she repeated yesterday with a creation billed as a Gollywog Dance. It was as fantastic a thing in acrobatic dancing as you are ever likely to meet face to face. But it aroused the first day's audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. As the show rolled along, one bright spot was immediately followed by another. Mrs. Lyman Harrower had two prize-winning opportunities before the curtain. Working in No. 1 is what they would call it in vaudeville, in the manner of Ruth Draper, she was a taxi driver in Paris. It was done in French, probably good Winsor School French, which made it easier to interpret. Later Mrs. Harrower was the calculating chorus girl with an eye to the main chance. Her share in the delights of "Vincent Ventures" more than fulfilled every promise.

But the show ran on at top speed, some of it particularly individual, more of it in the groupings of chorals, travesties and smart sketches. Mrs. John E. Thayer, Jr., with the air of a veteran, contributed two numbers of more than passing interest; she ridiculed Technocracy in song and she led the Twittville Chorale Society in a recital that reminded us of our own adolescent days in Keene, N. H. Mrs. Hugh O'Neil Hencken, golden haired and gifted, presented a solo dance number that won immediate favor, and Betty Foster, in an impressionistic blues number, "So Alone," raised a lovely voice for the benefit of dull and cheerless times somewhere. To her assistance came Charlotee Lyman, garbed like Dante, and dancing in communistic spirit.

"Vincent Ventures" of this series, as in the last, was illumined by the presence of Ruby Newman, whose orchestral direction was both sympathetic and encouraging. He ran the show without a quivering note. In any event the auditor was regaled with musical numbers of quality. It was good entertainment for the ear and, perhaps, even more pleasing to the eye.

Horror and Fun Served on Two Screens

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Thrills and laughs are the highlights of the new program at the Paramount and Fenway, generously doled out in the latest horror picture, "The Mystery of the Wax Museum," and a crackerjack comedy, "Sailor's Luck." The former has its fill for fans who like melodrama of this type, and the latter untaps hilarity for patrons of all likes and dislikes. It's one of the best of recent fun films out of Hollywood.

The story of the figures in wax begins with powerful strokes. The introduction has epic sweep and depth of appeal; it is dynamic drama. These sequences establish Lionel Atwill as the expert maker of the dummies, a true artist until fire destroys his all. Thereafter, he rebuilds his museum, but by the ghoulish use of human bodies for his models. A rather trite newspaper angle is interwoven, and finally the fiend is unmasked just as he is about to sacrifice the life of pretty Fay Wray to gain an image of Marie Antoinette.

Had the producers stuck to the earlier idea, and played with equal skill upon the greater theme, they would have fashioned an outstanding "thriller." As it is, "The Mystery of the Wax Museum" is simply good audience fare, satisfactorily enacted. But it could have been made a masterpiece.

"Sailor's Luck," on the other hand, has the expert direction of Raoul Walsh, a gentleman who is never content to let talk eclipse his cameras. Hence, the movie is joyously lively, steps with a glorious rush of action, never lags, but has "something doing all the time."

James Dunn and Sally Silers are the stars, a couple of clever performers, especially the male of the species. Dunn is the life of the party. Sammy Cohen barges in, always comically; Frank Moran is another good one. Esther Muir is fine as a lady of leisure.

Rubber Sandwich Days Back Again With Beer in Restaurants

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

We have now learned what are the recommendations of the special commission appointed by Governor Ely to propose the necessary legislation for the control of the distribution of alcoholic beverages. The report of this commission is not, of course, mandatory upon Governor Ely, and it is not impossible that when a bill is drawn for the Legislature it may contain some changes. It is also not merely possible but probable that the bill in its final form as passed by the General Court will include still more changes.

I am taking it for granted that some legislation will be necessary. There is, of course, merely [illegible] the appointment of a permanent commission [illegible] that commission with power. But if I know the legislative branch in American politics it is [illegible] not to have a finger in the pies. At any rate the special commission has reported in due season and we may expect that by the time beer is actually available the State of Massachusetts will have an adequate legal set-up to take care of it.

Strict Control Ahead for Beer

It must be remembered that the proposals of the special commission are undoubtedly intended to cover the whole problem which will be raised when the Eighteenth Amendment is finally repealed. Some of its provisions are [illegible] severe for the regulation of four per cent beer. The commission looks forward, obviously, to the legalization of wines and spirits.

Nevertheless the commission intends to control the beer industry just as strictly as it proposes to control the traffic in [illegible] liquors. This, of course, involves a paradox. The [illegible] is being passed on the assumption—or at least the pretended assumption—that four per cent beer does not nullify the Constitution because it is not intoxicating. If that is true we are told that there is no reason why these light beers should not be sold [illegible] soft drinks. They should be [illegible] fruit stores [illegible] draught at soda fountains.

The Massachusetts commission [illegible] light beers may be [illegible] it is wise to treat them as if they were soft drinks. [illegible] the control of light beer will be not only as strict as that we were accustomed to before prohibition but in addition there will be new controls made advisable by social changes brought about in time. These new regulations will undoubtedly be the target of the fiercest attack from those disgruntled individuals who abhor the thought of any control [illegible].

It is a truism of [illegible] principle, however we [illegible] until it has been put in operation. Six months of these regulations seriously enforced will [illegible] cannot do in this new era than any amount of theoretical argument now. But one can at least list the arguments pro and con.

The first is the problem of whether drinking standing up in a room devoted exclusively to drinking is more [illegible] to drink sitting down in a room in which food is [illegible]. There is as yet no [illegible] will be necessary to [illegible] one wishes a glass of beer. If it is not necessary to order food then the problem reduces itself to a mere question of bodily position, upright on two feet or [illegible] on a chair. If it is necessary to order food then the question of an added and unnecessary expense to the drinker has to be taken into consideration and the effect of that expense on the revenue to be derived from beer. Also it involves the question of what is to be called the "Raines law sandwich" [illegible] was dusted off occasionally and [illegible] table . . . but which had to be paid for.

Control of Speakeasy Big Problem

My own feeling is that the restaurant clause for the drinking of draught beer will [illegible] speakeasies. [illegible] will multiply and [illegible]. The licensed [illegible] that brings in revenue to the state will suffer and the unlicensed business, that brings in no revenue, will flourish. Saloons can be controlled. Speakeasies can not be controlled.

The most controversial problem in the whole matter, however, is the proposal to license the drinker, to require him to buy a yearly license. That license will presumably not be granted him if he has a record for drunkenness within a year. It will presumably not be granted him if he has been convicted of drunken driving and lost his automobile license within a year. And presumably if the logic of the situation is followed [illegible] license will be revoked if he is later convicted of drunkenness and of driving under the influence.

The opposition to this will be tremendous. Yet I confess that it seems to me the only possible way to deal with the problem of keeping the roads safe for sober automobilists and pedestrians. A fool with enough beer in him is almost as dangerous as a fool with whiskey in him. After all, it is not as if it were a brand-new proposition. The device has long been used in the Dominion of Canada apparently not without success. It will bring in a considerable amount of revenue. It will put the onus of proof on the man who cannot stand his liquor, or the woman, either.

License Will Cut Down Drunks on Road

Even before prohibition it was illegal to sell liquor over the bar to a man whose family had requested that he be denied liquor. There is, of course, the danger of a nasty system of spying and anonymous informing growing up and I do not at this moment see how such a difficulty can be satisfactorily dealt with. Speakeasies would, of course, let it be known that a person needed no license card to drink there. The speakeasy business would undoubtedly profit in this respect, too.

These are serious questions. The solving of them will be troublesome and, perhaps, unsatisfactory. But I will put myself on record here as agreeing that some such scheme of personal drinking licenses strictly enforced is the only way I see at present to cut down the probable proportion of drunks on the road. It seems to me a much more important proposal, much more necessary, much more justifiable, than the technical and unnecessary abolition of the "saloon."

All of which only goes to show that time does not stand still. We cannot turn the clock back to 1919. Too much water has flowed under the bridges. Conditions have changed in too many respects. Regulations must be invented to meet two problems which did not exist before: the universal automobile and the universal speakeasy. Governor Ely's special commission has done a thoughtful, sincere, conscientious, competent job. It is to be hoped that the General Court will not play horse with it too irresponsibly.

ATTITUDE CHANGED

Judge Stone testified just before [illegible] that in November, 1931, Miss Clark suddenly became critical and demanded to know the exact date when he would turn over her money and other property to her.

"I noticed the change in her attitude," continued Judge Stone, "while I was drawing up her will. I asked if she planned to make gifts to anyone and she replied that she was not going to 'give anything to anybody.' There was a chair which she had designated as my chair and which she had promised to give me, but she changed her mind about that and other things.

"She did not want me as executor. Instead, she mentioned that she would like to have Harvard University act as her executor. We had discussed plans for her funeral which I was to carry out, but a month later she wanted her money and books."

Mr. Marshall—Did this change in her attitude affect you? A.—Yes. I considered it a very grave matter, because I had been trying hard to restore her to her social standing, and feared that she might slip back into her old life and state of nervousness and timidity.

$61,237 IN CUSTODY

Judge Stone further testified that [illegible] Inez Clark and [illegible] of the estate of her sister, Dr. Gertrude Clark, he had the custody of $61,237 as [illegible]

[illegible]

Rep. Logan—"How was it that when you drew $500 as pay from a bank deposit of $1310 you did not make it $1000, if you considered much more was due you?" A.—"I preferred to draw $500, as I did not want to draw too close. That was my policy."

Jealousy Tends to Grow, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Jealousy

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 20 and have been engaged to a young man for six months. I really loved him devotedly when we became engaged, but now sometimes I wonder if I did a wise thing in saying "Yes." He is terribly jealous and tries to tell me where I should go, what I should do and think, and when I do something that displeases him he sulks and pouts instead of telling me what I have done that offends him. Sometimes I feel it would be very foolish for me to marry him, and again I feel I'd be terribly unhappy without him. He is crazy about me [illegible]

"Gee! I wish my mom knew about Chateau"

HAVE YOU TRIED CHATEAU—the new cheese delight?

If you haven't, you're in for a treat! Chateau is as rich in flavor as its golden color promises. It has a tang you've tasted in no other cheese. It's so good—so different—you'll want plenty of it.

And it's ideal for children—easily digested, and contains the two milk minerals that build strong bones and teeth.

Try Chateau. One taste will tell you why it has thrilled the cheese-lovers of its native Canada and of its adopted America.

Chateau comes in a special wrapping that keeps it fresh and that does away with rind and waste. It goes great with pie, crackers or fruit—and it's a treat by itself. Order some now.

Borden offers a variety of cheese delights

If you like cheese, you should get acquainted with these other Borden treats: Borden's Swiss, Borden's American, Borden's Brick, Borden's Limburger, Borden's Pimento, Borden's Cream Cheese, Military Brand Camembert, Liederkranz.

SNOW TRAINS to New Hampshire are still the most popular sport among the young social set and their escorts Sunday mornings see crowds of gayly clad boys and girls piling onto the special trains at the North Station with skis snowshoes, bob-sleds and what not, all ready for a day in the snowy hills up north of us . .

ELIZABETH WELLS

Last Sunday we did likewise . . . the E. N. O., the Princess and Sweet-face arose with the screech of dawn, slipped down to the kitchen quietly and put up a picnic lunch of sandwiches and hot coffee, piled the flivver full of rugs, wraps and sport gear, and pushed off in time for the 8 o'clock special . . . it was marvelous fun!

Trucks filled with straw met the section of the train at North Woodstock for Franconia Notch, the Flume, Profile, Eskimo Dog Ranch and the Charkarohen Sugar Camps . .

At the Eskimo Dog Ranch we fell off . . . that is the only way we have discovered to get off of a pung . . . and we took a dog-sled ride through the country roads and woods of this part of the country . . . it was thrilling and realized a life's ambition . . .

We were going to stop off at the sugar camp to watch the sugaring-off but were eager to get on our skis and show the world . . . whatever we DO show the world when we are on skis . . .

At Lincoln large pungs were available for the trip to the toboggan slide the ski jump and the skating rink and off we went in a cloud of snowflakes . . . other pungs passed us filled with laughing screaming singing humanity . . . that is what they were because you cannot tell boys from girls in ski trousers, sweaters and caps since the men started wearing bright colors . . and soon we saw the sign "Lincoln Welcomes the Snow Train" . .

Then the Toboggan Shute

A LOVELY HOUR WAS SPENT on the snow-shoe trails through the woods of Lincoln . . . we had a bob-sled ride down the path and a ride on the toboggan shute . . . proving that we can take it . . . sometimes right on the snoot

The ride back home in the packed, jammed cars, with plenty of fun and jokes . . . gramaphone playing somewhere . . . young ones singing . . . is worth the trip any way you look at it the relics of the noon-day lunch are not to be despised, either May we say again "It's grand fun" . .

We regret to hear that Mrs. Theodore Frothingham fell down recently and broke her elbows, both of them . . she was not skiing, simply walking across her drawing-room floor and an insidious Oriental proved the hazzard . . . so you see that Fate keeps on happening no matter WHERE you are . . .

Mrs. Channing Wells is returning from New York today . . she is planning to go to Europe to meet her attractive daughter Elizabeth next month

Among Shining Lights in Show

NANCY MORISON IS ONE of the shining lights in the Vincent Ventures . . . Miss Nancy has the solo dance in the hunting scene, a dance which was designed for Marilyn Miller by Alexis Kosloff her teacher . . . under whom Miss Morison also studied . . The hunting solo dance was released to Nancy by Miss Miller three years ago and this presentation will be its premiere in Boston . . . music, pantomime and costume, not forgetting the dogs are exactly as Marilyn Miller executed it in New York . . .

Babbette and Nancy Morison are having a dinner for 16 before the last junior supper dance next Friday night at the Hotel Statler . . . Miss Babbette is one of the four lucky debutantes of the season who have been invited to this post-deb and young smart set affair . . . we believe "Lindy" Collens and Peggy Bradley are also among the "luckies . . .

Charming Mrs. Norman Greeley of 81 Beacon st. is having the members of the Christopher Shop to luncheon on Tuesday March 21 . .

Program Planned at Hospital

WORD COMES TO US THAT Mrs. Arnold Scott and her daughter, Betty, one of the loveliest debutantes of two seasons ago, have settled themselves very cozily in the Quaker City and like Philadelphia very much indeed . . . Betty is studying at Bryn Mawr .

MR. BOSTON

Around the Town ↕ Eddie Mack Speaks
In a Rumble Seat Al McCoy's Career
Meeting Live One Boxed When Only 8

By JACK CONWAY

Hop right up into the rumble seat and go places with me First stop at Eddie Mack's Argonne A. A office

"Just got a wire from Babe Hunt," says Mack. "He is starting East for his fight with Jose Santa at the Arena on next Thursday night. Get this one from the Babe. He says he will flatten Santa so that he will look like a pancake. Anyhow Hunt has a bundle of confidence."

Mr. Boston

Let me introduce you to the gang in Mack's office. There is Phil Schlossberg, Jim MacDonald and Dave Arrata. All steamed up over boxing again as a result of the recent Argonne A A show which clicked

A traffic cop will be tagging our car if we do not hurry. Will be seeing you later boys

We shall drop in and see who is punching the bag at Jerry Buckley's gym or Friend at

Hello Mr Boston'

"Hello, Johnny Buckley. Hello, Jack Sharkey. How's the champ?"

"Back in the gym and working hard," chirps Sharkey. "I want to be right for Carnera. That's a tough fight. I was out on the road this morning for three miles. Tom Coolidge of Newton was along with me. Tom is reducing. When I got through working out today, I weighed 209 pounds. I shall work for a week or so Later I am going fishing and tramping through the woods in Nova Scotia. I shall visit the scenes of Sam Langford's boyhood. Maybe I'll find how the 'Tar Baby' got his famous punch I could use such a sock against Carnera.

"I love the outdoors and the woods. The silence and the grandeur of the whole thing gets me. The long tramps through the brush help harden my legs No fighter is any better than his legs. Wish you could come along with me I would get you up so early in the morning you would not have any desire to stay up all night You would go to bed by 9 o'clock at night."

Al McCoy Started Boxing When Eight Years Old

"Who's that husky youngster over there punching the bag?" asks Mr Boston

"You've seen him box at the Garden replies Jerry Buckley 'That's Al McCoy of Waterville sensation of the 'New Talent' shows He is in with Tony Celli at the Garden on next Friday night

'Hello, McCoy shouts Mr Boston across the gym 'When you get through working I would like to talk with you'

I'm through now" says Al as he dukes Mr. Bosotn.

'Tell me something about yourself," presses Mr Boston

My real name is LeViasseur," replies McCoy. "I was born in Winslow, Me., 21 years ago. Mother and father French. My mother died a year ago My family now lives in Waterville. I have been boxing since I was eight years old. I used to appear at smoke talks and at club meetings.

I have been boxing as a professional for four years. I have had about 35 or 40 bout Hy Diamond gave me my toughest scraps. We fought twice and each of us won once

'What about your bout with Celli next week?' questions Mr. Boston

'I'll defeat him [illegible] [illegible] Later I shall [illegible] Johnny Indrisano'

' Don't you think Indrisano is [illegible] [illegible] asks Mr. Boston.

No," answers McCoy. "Indrisano is going. I am coming. Youth always conquers.'

Adolph Heuser Now Smokes Pipe Like Collee Yougth

Let's see who is back of that smoke over in the corner.

"Hello, Heuser."

"Hello, Mr Boston How do you like my black eye? Rosenbloom did that by panching with his open glove It was a good fight That is all I care I like to give the fans a run for their money

'You look like an American college boy smoking a pipe," says Mr. Boston laughingly.

I felt like one today," replies Heuser. "I bought a new auto and speeded it up to 45 miles an hour. A traffic cop then gave me a tag. Tell the people I want to fight Rosenbloom again for the title. Next time I win. I am also willing to meet Mickey Walker. I can muzzle the man you writers call the Toy Bulldog."

Jose Santa steps into the conversation Santa just finished a workout with Dick Madden.

"I knocked out Maloney and Dixon," says the giant "Now I stop Hunt. Maybe some day I fight Sharkey."

Sharkey comes along and grins

Homer Rainault Talks About Building Boxing Arenas

'When are you and Dan Kelley going to make that trip to my club in Springfield?' asks Homer Rainault who has a bundle of blue prints under his arm

'Soon" replies Mr. Boston I am getting the urge to take some kind of [illegible] Why the plans?'

Considering building [illegible] new boxing arenas. My club in Holyoke [illegible] in New England for seeing a fight. The place can seat 2800 persons. The ring is in a pit and the seats are built up around it. The place cost $150,000, but I could duplicate it at present-day prices for $100,000. I have paid off $25,000 on the mortgage, and also built an outdoor arena out of profits. Let any other promoter try to equal my record. I am looking around Boston and Troy for spots for new arenas. There is money in the boxing game for a small club, especially in Boston."

Random Shots at the Target

Speaking of the high cost of eating, the public restaurant on the 14th floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building socks you 40 cents for a cup of coffee if that is all you care to have . . . One of those minimum charge arrangements Somebody should tip the management the war ended in 1919 . . . Jack Sharkey, Ed Don George, Joe Gilman, Johnny Buckley, Paul Bowser, Francis Ouimet, Alex MacLean and other leaders in sports will be guests of the Advertising Club of Boston at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel next Sunday noon . . . R. P. Tibolt of the New England Coke Company is chairman of the luncheon . . . Mr Tibolt has increased business by newspaper advertising during a period when less courageous business leaders are buying red ink . . . During the bank holidays the New England Coke Company used double paged advertisements in Boston newspapers to get new business, and to prove it had faith in America and in President Roosevelt . . . Of course, I shall bow in at the luncheon chiefly to tell Mr. Tibolt he is as great a champion in his line as Sharkey George and Ouimet are in their specialties.

IVY ANDREWS' BROTHER MAY BE HILL ACE

By JOE CASHMAN

Sarasota, Fla. March 15—Lady Luck plays some queer tricks on ball clubs

Take for example, the case of Kenneth Kermit Andrews, younger brother of Ivy Paul, right-handed ace of the Red Sox.

As the Fenway Flock started south few ever remembered that he was to work out with the club and those few could only expect less from him than any other candidate on the squad

He wasn't under contract. All that was known of him was that he had been recommended by brother Ivy, who had asked Bob Quinn permission to take him along to training camp Bob granted the request but made no effort to sign the boy.

"Young Andy" was all Kermit was called during the first few days of practice, and it wasn't often he was called Very little attention was paid him.

TOP OF HEAP NOW

How different today Now he lives at the club's expense having been duly signed and added to the roster, and indications are that he will still be on the Yawkey payroll long after several of the highly-touted youngsters in camp have been forgotten

At this writing Kermit stands out as the most promising rookie hurler on the staff with the possible exception of Justin McLaughlin

The younger Andrews' pro experience is limited to a few weeks last season at Reading, where he caught on through Ivy's influence

You would never guess this though from watching him on the mound He acts like a veteran campaigner

The above is Ivy's coaching Big [illegible] has been [illegible] the kid for years and [illegible] been [illegible] with an apt pupil [illegible] hard Kermit a red head If [illegible] see the color of the pitcher's hair it's impossible to tell from the stands which of them is working.

KERMIT MAY BE ACE

With a little more seasoning Ivy insists Kermit will become the ace of the family Mrs. Andrews their mother, who is here watching over them says the same thing

Kermit is the youngest player on the squad being three months away from his 21st birthday He stands six feet tall and weighs 190 [illegible]

[illegible]

Lloyd was gift of his brother Paul He had been released outright [illegible] Little Poison in the hope of getting the Pirates to farm the kid out brought him to camp When the season opened, Little Poison was in centerfield with Paul in right

[illegible]

[illegible] frown on the Red Sox [illegible] the change in ownership, she may have experienced a change of heart At least, the acquisition of young Andrews is cause to believe that such is the case

Sox Have Confidence

This Red Sox team is going to surprise a lot of folks, if it can retain its present faith in itself That inferiority complex which licked so many former Fenway outfits has disappeared The McManusmen saw the Cards whip the A's That didn't bother them a bit "They won't lick us," they said, and they kept their word, winning, 6 to 1.

The Yannigans [illegible]

[illegible] royal rooter, being headed home He enjoyed his first trip South with the club immensely but no more than the gang enjoyed having him around

Up Diamond Ladder With Eddie Collins

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

CHAPTER XI

Most ball players have their little peculiarities and superstitions There's Joe Sewell for instance You never saw Joe go on the diamond without touching first base. You never saw him leave it without crossing home plate

Connie Mack, who made Eddie Collins what he is today and should be satisfied, had his odd fancy [illegible]

[illegible] of his cap You've never seen Collins after missing two strikes fail to take the gum off his cap and put it in his mouth again

Eddie's gum shifting stunt didn't originally start from superstition Let Eddie, himself describe how it started

HOW IT STARTED

One day early in my baseball career I discovered I had no gum," says the new Red Sox chief "So I asked the other fellows on the bench for a stick No one had any 'All right, you birds I said, 'I'll get my own hereafter and keep it.'

"I sent the bat boy for some gum When it came time for me to go to bat I wanted to remove it but preserve it. Remembering how Hal Chase stuck his gum on his cap I did the same.

"It was several games after that before I started taking it off my cap after a couple of strikes. I don't remember just what pitcher I was facing but he was a tough one and I missed a couple by the proverbial mile. I thought of my gum and took it off my cap and commenced chewing I connected with the next offering and straightened it out for a single

Now I'm not superstitious But somehow or other shifting the gum from cap to mouth when I got in a tough box seemed to ease my mind That's why I kept it up

IT WOULDN'T BEHAVE

Upon once a time Eddie's gum placing stunt got him in a laughable situation It was in a close game against the Yankees, Jones, Shawkey and Hoyt had been riding Eddie when he was at bat and Eddie was tossing back some choice airy persiflage.

With two strikes on him Eddie reached up to his cap for his gum It was a hot day, Eddie had a much bigger "chaw" than usual The heat softened the gum When Eddie reached for it he pulled it down in strings

[illegible]

[illegible] the Yankees called Eddie by a new pet name

It was 'Gum Face' The name, like the gum, 'stuck' for a long time

Washburn, Martin Train for Fray

Jack Washburn and Bull Martin two of the wrestling game's foremost roughnecks, started training today for their match which will be the feature of Steve McPherson's weekly show at the Arena next Wednesday night

McPherson has signed Gentleman Jack and Bull to wrestle to a finish in a bout in which nothing but the strangle hold will be forbidden.

A semifinal is billed between Bad Bob Russell and Benny Ginsberg [illegible] will meet Leo Papianos.

BOSTON ICEMEN IN 6-DAY RACE

Providence, March 17—Two prominent Boston speed skaters Walter Thorne and Tony Bernard have entered as a team in the unique six-day skating marathon race, which is to start at the Rhode Island Auditorium tomorrow

Thorne is a member of the Olympic Club and has long been a prominent [illegible] 1921 1925 [illegible] has competed one [illegible] 25 [illegible]

Bernard a speed skater of note [illegible]

[illegible] will be conducted on [illegible] lines as a six-day bike [illegible] riding two hours and then resting Daily sprints will be held with the points resulting to count in the final award

Bobby McLean, professional champion, will pair with Al Basiliere, Rhode Island youth

Shires Says He Can Outplay Buck Jordan

St. Petersburg Fla March 17 Although the Boston Braves bowed for the second time to the New York Yankees, 5 to 2, in the third game of an exhibition series, Bill McKechnie was satisfied with the playing of his Warriors.

Bill was quite certain that his team would triumph over the Phils today

Tom Zachary, veteran southpaw was due to start on the mound against the slugging Quakers Harry Seibold and Bradley Lake were to step onto the mound to relieve the ancient hurler

"The more I see of Wright in action the better I like him," said Manager McKechnie. "I can play him at any infield berth. His hitting will earn him a job."

Art Shires, who hopes to land the regular first base job is anxious to get in a game Shires is confident that he can play a better game at the initial sack than his rival, Buck Jordan.

"I don't think Jordan is a very hot first baseman," said Arthur today. "After seeing him play against the Yanks in three games I believe I can get in there and show him up."

Handy Randy Moore versatile Tribal player is still Manager McKechnie's [illegible] McKechnie [illegible] Randy at [illegible] and right field and expects Randy to be a [illegible] summer

After watching Gyselman and Wright perform in the infield berths the regulars are beginning to take their jobs more seriously

In spite of the fact that Bill Urbanski still is unsigned, McKechnie has allowed him to play in exhibition games

B. U. TRACKMEN MEET M'GILL

After weeks of preparation, the Boston University track squad makes its debut in fast company tomorrow night when it competes against McGill University at the East Newton st. armory The proceeds will go to the Emergency Loan Fund for needy students.

The meet is expected to be very evenly fought and the relay is apt to decide the meet. The big question marks seem to be Phil Edwards and Charlie Drew. Edwards is listed for three events and Drew for four. If the Terriers can cut in somewhere and take a few firsts away from these two stars they stand a good chance to win the meet.

Edwards is conceded the 600, but Coach Al Welch feels that the former American half mile champ may be surprised in the 300 Art Horn and Bernie Bloom of B. U who may come through in the 300

Drew is slated for a first in the hurdles, but in the dash, shot put and high jump he will have plenty of work cut out for him.

N. Y. MAT KING RISKS TITLE IN GARDEN CONFLICT

By JACK CONWAY

Bibber McCoy of Cambridg who starred at baseball and football when at Holy Cross, receives an opportunity to gain national standing as a wrestler when he clashes with Jim Browning of Missouri, recognized as world's heavyweight champion in New York, in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Boston Garden tonight

It will be the second time McCoy has had an opportunity to scale the wrestling heights. When Gus Sonnenberg was champion McCoy almost knocked the old Dynamiter from his throne

Bibber has looked impressive in his last two starts He went to a draw with Nick Lutze in a one hour time limited tussle while he disposed of Hans Bauer of Chicago

McCOY IN TOP FORM

McCoy has been training for tonight's tussle for two weeks and is ready to step in and make a stout hearted bid for Browning's title

Browning will be making his first Boston mat appearance since he defeated Strangler Lewis in their New York title bout It was his famous turnover body scissors that enabled Browning to win from Lewis. He believes the same hold will again give him a victory over McCoy

Since conquering Lewis Browning has been active in bouts in this country and Canada Frank Smith his manager tells me Browning has drawn 100,000 persons at his shows There apparently is no depression in sports when the Missouri giant is carded to do his stuff

Browning is determined to clean up the heavyweight wrestling situation. If he wins, he will demand a crack at Ed Don George. He is also prepared to give battle to Jim Londos or anybody else who sets himself up as a head man of any of the numerous wrestling wheels

MALCEWICZ IN ACTION

Panther Joe Malcewicz of Utica one of the best of the heavyweights will give Roland Kirschmeyer of Oklahoma the acid test in the semifinal

Man Mountain Dean of Georgia will have John Spellman of Providence as an opponent in the main preliminary. Spellman is confident he has the necessary power and knowledge of wrestling holds to tip over the Man Mountain

The balance of the preliminary card is as follows Blue Masked Marvel vs. Leo Numa, Casey Kazanjian vs Jim Heslin Bob Russell vs. Pete Tingus, Matros Kirilinko vs. George Saunders; Pat Fraley vs. Joe Manuel, the new Portuguese star; Jose Dominguez vs. Leo Arpino, and Hank Barber vs. Buck Weaver

The show will start at 8 15 with the main bout stars entering the ring as near 10 o'clock as possible

Magic Coin Picks Browning to Win

Jack Conway's famous magic coin rolled around quite a bit before it finally came down "heads" which in this particular case was the tip that Jim Browning would win over "Bibber" McCoy in their finish bout at the Boston Garden tonight. The coin's 1933 batting average:

W.	L	P C
6	2	.750

Garden Program

(First bout at 8 15. Main bout at 10 p. m.)

MAIN BOUT

Jim Browning, Missouri, vs. Bibber McCoy, Cambridge. Best two falls in three

SEMIFINAL

Joe Malcewicz vs. Rollend Kirschmeyer. One fall, half hour time limit.

PRELIMINARIES

Man Mountain Dean vs. John Spellman.
Blue Masked Marvel vs. Leo Numa.
Casey Kazanjian vs. Jim Heslin.
Bob Russell vs. Peter Tingus.
Matros Kerilinko vs. George Saunders.
Pat Fraley vs. Joe Manuel
Jose Dominguez vs. Leo Arpino.
Hank Barber vs. Buck Weaver.

BRUINS SLIP TO 2d PLACE IN N. H. L. STRUGGLE

SPORTS

Mutuels Helping Florida Schools. Betting Machines Aid to Racing.

By BILL CORUM

Miami Beach, Fla., March 17 (US)—Now and then in this business it is a good idea to sit down and write as sensible an article as you can write and that is what I am going to do now.

I am prompted to do so by the announcement from Hialeah Park that in 45 days of horse racing over that track, the mutuel machine handled $8,038,643. Of that staggering total the most important part is what goes to the treasury of the State of Florida.

This is three per cent of the total, or $241,159.29, and I say it is the most important part because it will go a long way toward keeping the public schools of this state open throughout the coming school year.

I stress the fact that because in New York State there is approximately six months of horse racing every year, which does not contribute one dime to the public school system, or any other state or city institution.

SYSTEM ANTIQUATED

We have in New York State and at one and the same time the best horse racing and the worst horse racing in the world. Best because it is the richest in tradition, and annually brings together the best and fleetest horses in the finest settings possible.

And worst because in some particulars, especially those which have to do with betting, without which there can be no racing at all. It smacks of the Civil War. Is, in plainer language, 75 years behind time.

The figures are not available, but I should say as a reasonably accurate guess that more than half the horses which have been racing here in Florida this winter could be classed as New York horses either through ownership or breeding.

Florida, before this winter is over, will have profited $300,000 from thoroughbred horse racing, whereas the Empire State, which produced most of the horses, most of the owners, trainers and jockeys, and also most of the $300,000, still waits for its first dollar of revenue from the thoroughbred industry.

MUTUELS COMING

Before the new season starts, they say, we are going to have some for mof betting that will produce revenue, and before another three years mutuel betting.

This last I have always believed, and still do believe, is the most desirable form of wagering on race horses. It is betting for fun, and finance for the state.

But of all the systems I have watched in operating to date, the mutuels make for the happiest type of racing. The recent Hialeah meeting is a case in point. During the 45 days of racing more than 190,000 persons passed through the turnstiles and thousands of them never had seen a race course before.

Thousands came and were entertained and lost no more than they could afford to lose for the sport provided. That is my idea of what racing should be.

There is no sense in allowing any horse track, or group of tracks, to operate beyond a reasonable length of time. Racing does not become a menace to the community until it is overdone.

ROSSMEN VISIT CANADIENS TOMORROW

By BILL GRIMES

One of the most general upsets of the National Hockey League season occurred last night, when the Bruins were tied by the Americans, Rangers were beaten by Les Canadiens and the Maple Leafs were bumped off by Red Wings in Detroit.

As a result the Bruins slipped back into second place a half game behind Detroit, but gained a point on the Rangers. Maroons moved up to within a game and one-half of Toronto by coming from behind to beat Ottawa in an overtime conflict. The Flying Frenchmen are now three points up on the Americans.

The Bruins' visit to Les Canadiens tomorrow night will have a strong bearing on the final standing of the Boston outfit in the American Division.

After the mixup last Tuesday night at the Garden, the Hawks may not bear down any too hard against Detroit in Chicago on Sunday night. In the event of a Red Wing victory in the Windy City, the Bruins will be eliminated from American championship hopes if they lose to the Frenchmen tomorrow night in the Forum.

FIRST PLACE TIE LIKELY

On the other hand, if the Wings trail the Hawks after the Bruins have either beaten or tied Canadiens, an even split of the points with Rangers next Tuesday will give them the edge over Detroit and will create a first place tie with Rangers, providing the Blue Shirts take Maroons in New York on Sunday.

Shore's Ribs O. K.

New York, March 17—Eddie Shore, Bruins' ace who banged into a goal in the course of his team's tie with the Amerks here, did not sustain broken ribs as at first feared. He was badly bruised, however.

In any event, the race is the closest in the annals of the N. H. L. and the final standing probably will be in doubt until the last games of the season are played next Thursday night.

The Bruins played without big Nels Stewart last night. Stewart contracted a fever. After spending the day in bed, Stewart went to the Garden but Manager Art Ross refused to allow him to dress.

Alex Smith put the Bruins out in front in the second period, after a solo but three minutes later Johnny Sheppard equalized while the Rossmen were played a man short.

WILD WAR IN DETROIT

Out in Detroit, the Red Wings and the Toronto Maple Leafs staged a wild battle in which the Flivver City tribe took a 1 to 0 verdict, after a half dozen fist fights.

Cooper Smeaton, the veteran referee, has been in many tough spots but nothing like that of last night in Detroit. Eb Goodfellow engaged in a fray with Chabot, after the goalie had crowned Eb with his stick. Police experienced trouble keeping the crowd of 12,000, away from Chabot and other Toronto players.

School Sixes Tilt on Charity Card

Arrangements were completed today for a hockey game between two star interscholastic league teams as an added attraction to the carnival at the Garden on Wednesday night.

An all star Greater Boston League team will meet an all star Bay State League team.

The all star school players probably will play three 15-minute periods. With the Bruins-All Intercollegiate team match already scheduled the carnival has two outstanding hockey features.

Tickets for the carnival go on sale at the Garden and all the down town agencies tomorrow.

MURRAY STARS AS REDS WIN

Providence, March 17 (AP)—Led by Leo Murray who scored a goal and helped in three others, the Reds defeated the Beavers, 6 to 4, here. The victory enabled them to climb back into a tie for first place in the Can-American League with the Arrows.

Penalties were as frequent as goals, with 19 being called. Harry Connor received a 10-minute misconduct penalty.

Miss Verry First in Title Golf

Southern Pines, S. C., March 17 (AP)—Miss Deborah Verry, youthful golfer from Worcester, Mass., toured the championship course at the Southern Pines Country Club in 87 strokes to win the fifth annual 36-hole women's mid-South golf championship with a 175 total.

Aided by long drives that gave her a decided advantage over the remainder of the field, Miss Verry marched home three strokes ahead of her nearest rival, Mrs. Sarah Fownes Wadsworth of Pittsburgh.

Top o' the Mornin'

By George Underwood

Sure, the heart o' me is strummin'
An' the laugh is on me lips,
An' the voice of me is hummin'
Faith, me feet are doin' steps!
Ochone, Biddy, dear, stop grievin'
Sure, the sky's no longer black,
For bedad, Hard Times are leavin'
An' Beer is comin' back!

Och, this Patrick Day's the gladdest
Sure there's music in me soul—
Chords of music quite the maddest
From a glad heart e'er didst roll.
Biddy, see the Joys amassin',
See the Glooms fast fade away,
Faith bedad, Hard Times are passin',
An' Beer'll be back to stay!

Faith, feet o' me, stop prancin'—
Whis-st, be aisy, now will you!
An' heart o' me, stop dancin',
As I dream of amber brew.
Biddy, fair our wind is blowin',
Soon our troubles will have flown,
For bedad, Hard Times are goin',
And Beer is coming home!

Grey Hip Pays $500 for $2 Win Bet

New Orleans, March 17 (US)—The big parade of long price winners was lengthened when Grey Hip, L. C. Parke's two-year-old chocolate gelding, came across in the first race at fair grounds park to pay $500.60 on a $2 investment. The place price was $351.80 on a $2 ticket and the show price $52.40.

Grey Hip's price established an all time record for long odds at New Orleans.

The longest price of the season was paid off on Augeas, which won the sixth race at Agua Caliente on Feb. 24, paying $840 to $2.

Fitchburg Plays Hillhouse Five

Newport, R. I., March 17 (AP)—The Bristol, Connecticut, high school basketball team opened the New England invitation tournament by smearing the Stearns High quintet of Millinocket, Me., 63-23. DeLasalle Academy of Newport upset Berlin, N. H., high 52-38.

The Fitchburg high school team qualified for the semifinal by overwhelming Orleans, Vt., 42-22.

The Hillhouse high school of New Haven beat Westfield, Mass., team, 33-18.

The semifinal round is played here tonight with De Lasalle opposing Bristol, and Fitchburg playing Hillhouse.

AMERICANS TIE BRUINS, 1-1

New York, March 17 (AP)—The Boston Bruins and New York Americans tied at 1-1 in their last National Hockey League contest of the season.

The draw put the Bruins in second place in the American section, a point behind the Red Wings, and left the Amerks three points behind the Canadiens.

N. H. RACE BILL AWAITS ACTION BY GOVERNOR

Concord, N. H., March 17 (AP)—A bill to legalize betting on horse races in New Hampshire had passed the Senate today, 19 to 4, completing the final legislative step prior to approval or disapproval by Gov. John G. Winant.

Gov. Winant to date has been non-committal on his attitude.

The measure can remain with the governor for five days and if, at the expiration of that period, he has not taken action it would become a law automatically.

Rockingham Track Improvement Planned

Concord, N. H., March 17—A few hours after passage by the Senate of legislation permitting pari-mutuel horse racing in New Hampshire, arrangements were being made to dress up the Rockingham track at Salem.

The Senate vote, passing the pari-mutuel racing bill by a roll call majority of 19 to 4, proved the bill to have backing strong enough to pass it in both houses even over a gubernatorial veto.

Jeby 8-5 Favorite to Beat Dundee

New York, March 17 (AP)—Ben Jeby, East Side battler who is recognized in New York State as middleweight champion of the world, will carry his laurels into the ring at Madison Square Garden tonight against a man he has never defeated, Vince Dundee.

Jeby and Dundee have met twice, with the latter winner on both occasions. Yet Jeby is an 8-5 favorite.

The semifinal brings together the Dutch windmill, Bep Van Klavern and Baby Joe Gans.

Y Track Title Games Billed Tomorrow

Over 200 competitors have been entered in the 13th annual senior and the 9th annual junior Massachusetts and Rhode Island Y. M. C. A. track championships at the Boston Y. M. C. A. tomorrow afternoon and evening.

In the senior meet, held in the evening, Boston will be defending the team title which has been held by it for two years. Lynn is the defending champion in the junior events. Junior events are to be run off in the afternoon.

Ban for Don Unless He Gives Lutze Go

Ed Don George, wrestling champion, will be barred in Connecticut unless he agrees to risk his title against Nick Lutze, he was warned by Thomas E. Donahue of the Conn. Commission today.

In a bout two weeks ago, Lutze pinned George for the deciding fall, but Referee Sam Smith was outside the ropes. The referee recovered to see George pin Lutze.

Promoter Paul Bowser has done his utmost to sign the men.

Harvard Fencers Duel Elis Tomorrow

Harvard's varsity fencing team will cross swords with Yale in the final dual meet of the season at New Haven tomorrow night.

The Crimson fencers will leave for New Haven with Coach Rene Peroy tomorrow morning. The lineup for the match is Hurd, Morgan, Walker, Yatsevich, Langenau. The Crimson team has been undefeated in intercollegiate competition this year.

30-Game Schedule for College Nines

New York, March 17 (AP)—The usual 30-game schedule for the Intercollegiate Baseball League, with Cornell playing 10 games as doubleheaders, all "on the road," was announced today.

The other five members of the league—Yale, Columbia, Princeton, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania will play home-and-home series, and will entertain Cornell in bargain bills.

6 FIST FIGHTS AS WINGS EDGE MAPLE LEAFS

Detroit, Mich., March 17 (AP)—In a hectic match, marked by half a dozen fist fights, a near riot, and a penalty to Lorne Chabot, Toronto goalie, the Detroit Red Wings battled to a 1 to 0 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs here, winding up the home National League hockey season in a blaze of glory.

In the third period the battle broke out. Ace Bailey and Emms starting off with a wild fistic battle. Then Chabot leaned out of his net to bump Goodfellow over the head with his stick and they battled. They fought again in the penalty box.

Small riots started among the 12,000 spectators and other players on the ice. Police quelled the disorder.

Conacher acted as goalie when Chabot served a penalty, and turned back all assaults.

Sixteen penalties were called.

"SHARLIE" -:- By Beatrice Burton

Sharie Goes to Live With Eddie at His Home and Her Heart Sinks at the Prospect

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Young and pretty Sharlie Dunn is attracted to irresponsible Eddie Wallis because he shows her a good time. One night Eddie takes Sharlie to his apartment and makes violent love to her. She flees in fear, and, returning home, interrupts a tete-a-tete between her mother and Carl Hanaberry, a friend's husband. Next evening Jim Barnum, a neighbor, invites Sharlie to the theater. As they leave Eddie arrives and forbids Sharlie to go. Sharlie, unable to resist Eddie, goes with him. On the way home from a roadhouse, Eddie's car runs out of gas. He and Sharlie spend the night in the car. Next morning Mrs. Dunn says Eddie will have to marry Sharlie. They are married and Dodie makes Sharlie go to live at Eddie's home.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

THE THOUGHT of the home that would be hers came flashing into her mind . . . Once more she saw the dusty red velvet couch with its broken springs. She saw the dusty dresser and the tumbled bed in Eddie's room. She saw the backyard with its empty packing cases and barrels—the yellow cat—

"Mother!" She swung away from Eddie as soon as the matter-of-fact ceremony was over and put her arms around her. "I want to go home with you!"

But Dodie, who had been crying all day, shook her head.

"No," she said firmly. "If I let you go on living at home, Eddie would be there all the time. It's better for you to start your married life the right way . . . And Sharlie, please don't start calling me 'Mother' after calling me 'Dodie' for years! I don't want everybody in the world to know I'm old enough to have a married daughter!"

Dodie Laughed

She laughed, but it was perfectly clear to Sharlie that she meant what she said. She never had let Sharlie call her "Mother."

The flat never had had much charm for Sharlie.

She always had been glad to get away from it.

But it looked like heaven itself to her that rainy afternoon when she went back to it to get her clothes. The rooms where she had lived all her life were like old friends all at once. Old friends that she was leaving.

"I'll keep thinking of you all here tonight," she said to her mother when the two of them were in her bedroom packing her clothes into two big suitcases, "and I'll be so homesick."

"Oh, no, you won't! Dodie replied, folding Sharlie's limp little house-dresses into a bag. You're crazy about Eddie and the two of you will have the time of your life. This is the beginning of your honeymoon, Sharlie!"

But Sharlie was very grave and quiet while she finished packing . . . Her white brush and comb and hand-mirror, how would they look laid out on that bare yellow oak dresser that stood in Eddie's room? Her clothes, where would she hang them? In some musty closet where Eddie kept his tobacco-scented garments?

Few Rooms

"Dodie," she said, "you know where I'll be living, don't you?—In a few rooms at the back of Mr. Wallis's hardware store. I've been there. It's a terrible-looking place!"

Her mother shrugged her shoulders. But her eyes were full of doubt and unhappiness.

"You should have thought of all this," she murmured, "before you went out to meet Eddie last night."

She closed the bags and Sharlie strapped them. There was nothing to do now but to call Eddie and go away with him.

She took one last long look at the room that had been hers for so long.

It was a white plain little room. But it seemed very dear to her at that moment.

"I feel just as if I were going to sleep here tonight, somehow," she said to Dodie.

Not many hours later they were both to remember that she had said that.

The rooms behind the hardware store looked dirtier and drearier than ever in the cold hard daylight when Sharlie followed her new husband into them that afternoon at five.

"Welcome home!" said Eddie with his cheerful grin, setting her two suitcases and her hatbox down in the middle of the sitting room.

Welcome home! Sharlie's delicate nostrils sniffed the stale air laden with the smell of cold ashes and mildew and tobacco.

Break the News

Her eyes went around the room. It was the worst-looking place she ever had seen, she told herself hopelessly.

"I'll go and break the good news to my dad while you get your bags unpacked," Eddie said to her.

The grin had faded fro mhis face and he was studying her with anxious, wistful eyes.

"This isn't a very swell home to bring you to, Babe," he told her. "but now that you're here you can fix it up maybe. I wish we could have gone to a hotel for a day or two. We could have if I hadn't blown in all my money last night."

Sharlie watched the slow, painful flush that covered his face as he talked. It came to her suddenly that he was ashamed of these untidy nasty rooms, and she felt sorry for him.

After all it wasn't his fault that Dodie had made the pair of them get married and come here to live.

"Eddie [illegible] is like some awful joke that's been played on us, isn't it?" she asked as she followed him into his bedroom. Their bedroom, now.

He dropped the bags on the floor and, turning, took her into his arms.

The Best Thing

"Why, no!" he said, and she could tell that he meant it. "It's not an awful joke at all. It's the best thing that ever happened—That's how I look at it. We would probably have been married sooner or later anyway."

But Sharlie shook her head and pushed him away from her. The smell of cigarettes that always had hung around him, intoxicating her, was suddenly sickening to her . . . It was just part of the stale, musty smell of this place where he lived.

"How am I going to stay here?" she asked herself when he had left her alone while he went to break the news of the wedding to his father.

She couldn't make herself believe that she really was going to spend the night in this place. She couldn't even bring herself to unpack her bags and put her clothing away in the golden-oak dresser with its bare the dusty top.

She was still sitting on the edge of the bed with her yellow felt hat on when Eddie came back into the room bringing his father with him.

Mr. Wallis made her think of Huckleberry Finn's father. He had a great deal of greasy black hair and a long thick black moustache. His eyebrows looked like strips of black fur above his watery blue eyes.

Smiling Broadly

He was smiling broadly when he came into the room and his smile revealed a mouthful of stained and broken teeth.

Sharlie's heart sank at the sight of him.

But before he had been in the room two minutes she began to like him.

If everybody else thought this marriage of hers and Eddie's was a tragedy, he certainly did not.

"Best thing that ever happened to you, Eddie Wallis!" he told his son solemnly when he had looked Sharlie over and shaken her small hand. "Nice little girl like this!—How did a loafer like him ever get you to fall for him, daughter?"

Then, before Sharlie had time to think of an answer, he went on:

"Well, we'll have to have a little celebration, won't we, children? What say we all go down to the Goodfellows' Grotto and have a chicken supper with all the fixin's? Nice little weddin' supper—and a little drink of wine right here before we go?"

Sharlie shook her head . . . Not for anything in the world would she walk into a restaurant with Eddie Wallis' father, she told herself! Why, he looked like a hobo.

"No. Let's stay right here tonight, Mr. Wallis," she said. "We can have a chicken dinner. Eddie, if you'll go out and buy a chicken and some carrots and onions and potatoes I can make some awfully good casserole chicken."

With a tight-lipped little smile on her face and a heart like lead, she put on an apron and went out into the kitchen.

Eddie and his father helped her get the meal ready. Both of them knew how to cook. Mr. Wallis cleaned the chicken, and Eddie, with tears running down his face, peeled the onions.

Sharlie found some clean linen in a drawer in the small dark dining room and set the table with it . . . So this was what she had come to, she told herself miserably, as she went to work. Keeping house for Eddie Wallis and his father in five dark little dirty rooms behind a hardware store on 17th st.

"I want to stay here," she thought. "I just won't stay here! —I won't let this thing happen to me!"

But it had happened to her, and here she was! Her mother had told her she couldn't stay in the flat any longer. She had no home now but this one . . . Her bags were in Eddie's room, her first meal for him was cooking in the kitchen, and she was setting the table for him and his father this very minute!

"I'm sunk!" she thought, wiping off the dusty seat of a chair with her little apron. She couldn't find a duster anywhere in the place.

Is Sharlie contented at Eddie's home? Read how she gets the first meal there. The next installment describes a turning point in her life.

Piccard to Tell of Stratosphere at Tech

Possibilities of the stratosphere airplane will be discussed Tuesday at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by Prof. Auguste Piccard, world-renowned stratosphere balloonist, who ascended to 54,120 feet above the earth, the highest point man has ever reached. Prof. Piccard will address the Faculty Club of Technology at noon. His twin brother, Dr. Jean F. Piccard, will also attend.

Collars for Beer Drinkers
A Silly Proposal

We are soon going to have the legal manufacture and sale of beer in Massachusetts.

Prohibition fanaticism and corruption are going to be displaced by common sense and true temperance and honesty.

At least that is our purpose.

We are on the threshold of a new era.

We must not plunge ourselves into it recklessly.

There must be ample government control of the liquor traffic, and we should not permit our lawmakers, of legalistic minds, to cramp and surround and irritate us with a lot of foolish regulations of our rights which made prohibition so unpopular.

The Governor's Committee offers a system of control and regulation patterned after the Canadian system that has proved effective.

A State Corporation would purchase the beer from the manufacturers and sell it to the wholesalers and retailers who would in turn dispense it to the public in hotels, cafes, restaurants and similar public places. The grocery store, for example, could dispense the bottled product for consumption elsewhere.

There seems to be a good deal of merit in this plan because it supplies an oversight of the quality of the product, of prices charged the consumers and of control of those who engage in the business.

Somebody, however, with about as much brains as you could tuck into a thimble, proposes that every citizen of Massachusetts must obtain a license from the State, at the rate of $1 a year, before he would be permitted to drink a glass of beer.

This is a striking example of the asinity of regulation.

Beer is not only a palatable beverage but its mild alcoholic content stimulates that bodily heat which is absent from anaemic people, notably the old folks of advanced years.

We can not think of anyone, at least anyone with an ounce of common sense, who would want to compel our old folks to sashay to some government dispensary and subscribe to oaths and affirmations and a parcel of red tape in order to procure the right to drink a glass of beer.

Let us be sensible in this matter.

We have learned from sorry experience that you can not regulate the habits of people when those habits do not include acts of moral turpitude.

Moreover, you have the home-brewer to deal with.

Are you going to encourage him to make and dispose of beer within the secrecy of his place? Or are you going to encourage him to patronize the product openly made, openly dispensed and from which the government will derive a revenue that will soften the heavy burdens of the taxpayers, now wilting under the load of taxation?

We have gone in for a common sense era. Now let us have it.

The Banking Inquiry
Investment Houses Should Be Probed

The announcement that the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency will shortly resume its investigation was expected.

With a new Congress, it was necessary that the personnel of the committee should be reconstructed.

Senator Norbeck, a Republican, remains a member of the Committee, but yields the Chairmanship to Senator Fletcher of Florida, its ranking Democratic member.

Gratifying also is the information that Ferdinand Pecora will continue as counsel to the committee.

In the three weeks of his active service Mr. Pecora succeeded in silencing all criticism as to the committee's sincerity and the effectiveness of its investigation.

His examination of witnesses was fair but unsparing. With directness and true aim he went to the core of the matters under consideration, and developed a panoramic picture of irregular banking methods which will be of immeasurable value as a guide to needed legislation.

It is stated that the committee purposes an exhaustive investigation of J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and similar types of banking and investment houses.

The relations between such houses and the institutional banks, through stock control or representation upon their boards of directors, constitute a legitimate subject of investigation.

Furthermore, many flotations in which the investing public has embarked heavily have been originated by the investment houses. An inquiry into the methods of these houses should throw much needed light upon the safeguards, as well as the hazards, of the public in its purchases of securities from the great distributing houses.

The intimation that the committee may not pursue its inquiry for the present into commercial banking does not, we hope, indicate that investigation in this field is at an end. This would make it appear, in the light of what already has been disclosed, that the committee has been a little disconcerted by its success.

Confidence is never helped by suppression. Suspicion will grow unless superseded by knowledge—the knowledge which thorough and impartial investigation alone reveals, and which is founded upon accurately determined facts.

Income Tax Mess
Evidence of Its Injustice Grows

Every day in every way you see unmistakable evidence of the futility and injustice of the income tax.

The national income tax will fall at least $4,000,000 short of its expectancy in Massachusetts, and probably $200,000,000 in the Nation.

Thus the income tax not only falls down miserably in a crisis but it causes another heavy load of taxes to be dumped upon real estate and industry and business.

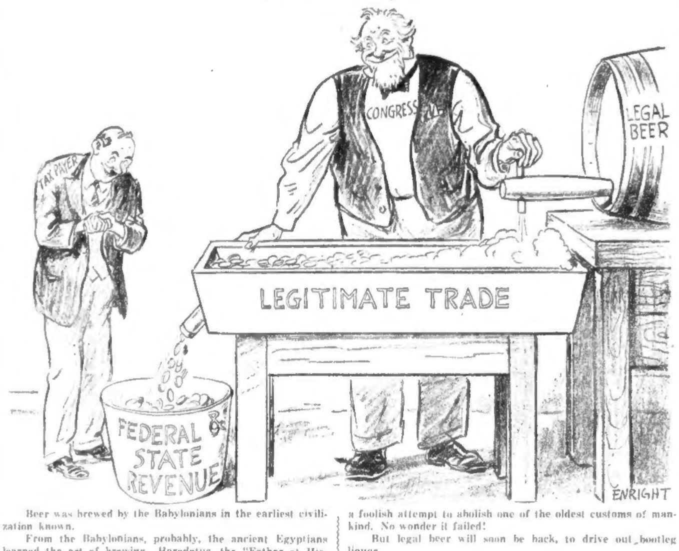
Who are escaping payment of the income tax and thereby contributing to the $4,000,000 shortage in Massachusetts and $200,000,000 in the Nation?

Certainly not the salaried man or the professional man or the small business man who earns his income by his labor and personal skill.

The salaried man, unlike Mitchell of the Chase National Bank, cannot hide his income through phony stock sales. His income MUST BE REPORTED to the income tax collectors whether he would like to conceal it or not, and they come swooping down to take from him four times the amount of income taxes he was obliged to pay when conditions were solvent and prosperity abounded.

What a fine mess this all is!

Alchemy!



Beer was brewed by the Babylonians in the earliest civilization known.

From the Babylonians, probably, the ancient Egyptians learned the art of brewing. Herodotus, the "Father of History," mentions Egyptian beer which, he says, the Greeks called "barley wine."

The attempt to abolish beer drinking by Prohibition was a foolish attempt to abolish one of the oldest customs of mankind. No wonder it failed!

But legal beer will soon be back, to drive out bootleg liquor.

And the American taxpayer, watching the flow of dollars into empty public treasuries, will agree with those convivial old writers who called beer the "golden brew."

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, March 17—Thoughts while strolling: So many celebrities seem to be coming out in lavender. That milk-white limousine with gold doors. Isaac Marcosson's barber shop glow. Something about Osgood Perkins suggests Adolphe Menjou. Whatever became of Dorothy Knapp?

Bernard Gimble, a Vincennes, Ind., boy who made good in the city. Three rent evictions in a block. Carl Helm, the expert on libel. No one ever sees Mayor Hylan, who used to be as omnipresent as Louis Wiley. Save for a feather of gray, Irene Castle looks as she did 15 years ago.

One word description of Helen Kane—pouty. New York's collegiate-looking sheriff. Rather see a wide hat and drooping mustache. Will Lengel could almost pass for Hitler. Anyway they have not shorn Charles M. Schwab of his lapel flower.

George Eichelberger always seems galloping to a fire, or something. What happened to the American Press Humorists? One of my favorite people—Rita Weiman. A serenity about the old Hotel Gotham. Ted Saucier the Waldorf's natty glossarian. And Peggy Fears in a toque of flaming red.

Maury Paul, whose critical gusto nips the climbers. That grand gentleman, Charles Dana Gibson, still walks as straight as an arrow. I am beginning to feel about the depression like the French Abbe, who, asked what he did during the revolution, replied: "I lived through it!" Or have I?

High jinks in the kitchen today. An oyster, for soup, slipped from a dish and slithered across the linoleum. The silly Sealyham pounced on it, and, when it flew out of his mouth with a blosh, he backed off into a pink-tongued squat. For fifteen minutes, half scared, he nosed the bivalve around, barking furiously. They're the craziest, those Sealyhams.

Thyra Winslow, the writer, recently lost her Pom, Lobo, perhaps the best-known dog along Broadway. Because of its and docility, Lobo attended many first nights, afternoon teas and even an occasional night club. Lobo also has crossed the ocean and continent many times.

Lecturing has reached almost a full stop. Some established bureaus are shuttered, and others are merely hanging on. I know one lecturer who journeyed to Philadelphia from New York for his railroad fare, $10 and a free dinner. He used to receive $200 and all expenses for his honey-lipped mewlings.

I think it was O. Henry who wrote of the poet who felt himself exploding with synonyms and parts of speech, and had to rush off somewhere to jot them down. I talked to a man, on the phone, last night, whose conversation suddenly became jumbled. He repeated several meaningless words. There was a quick silence and a sound like a falling receiver. I was getting ready to phone the superintendent of the building when he called back. For two days he had been trying to fashion the 14th line of a sonnet. The fugitive line came to him while talking to me, and he dropped the receiver to rush to his desk and immortalize it on paper.

Note to biographer: Stick in a notation—"He was also an inspiration to poets."

Last evening, I passed the site of Richard Watson Gilder's old home on East 15th street, called "The Studio." It was a stable remodeled by Stanford White, the first of the stable-studios popping out, like mushrooms after a rain, in Greenwich Village. This, also was the first real literary salon, forerunner of the pretenders who later established the pseudo-Bohemianism now so rampant. Oliver Herford is about the last of the old guard living in that section.

Speaking of mushrooms after a rain in abandoned breweries, on Third avenue, are mushroom plants where a faked fog and artificial shower, at the right moment make mushrooms zip out in a jiffy. Imagine, tricking a mushroom that way!

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Send Son to Jail?

WOULD YOU send your son to jail?

Suppose you had a boy—an idolized only child—for whom you had struggled and sacrificed through lonely widowed years.

Elsie Robinson

And suppose when that boy was 18, working at his first job, that he "lifted a little change" from the cashier's desk.

A hideous blow! But you said to yourself—"He's only a child. Surely his employer will forgive if I ask him for leniency and return the money."

So you did—and forgiveness was granted. And the boy, shocked and sobbing, promised it would never happen again.

But then suppose the boy, now 19, began running about with an extravagant, madcap girl, who demanded more fun than the boy could give her—

And again the boy took money.

But this time by forgery. A small sum, but it put him within the reach of the law.

Yet you could still save him if you made restitution, as the boy, mad with terror, begged you to do.

Would you do it?

Would you buy him off from the consequences of his theft?

OR WOULD YOU REFUSE TO HELP?

WOULD YOU HARDEN YOURSELF AGAINST HIS PITIFUL PLEADING: STEEL YOURSELF AGAINST THE ANGUISH OF YOUR OWN MOTHER LOVE—AND SEND YOUR CHILD TO JAIL?

An awful dilemma? Yes. But an American mother is facing that dilemma today. As you sit reading these questions, she is pacing back and forth in a frenzy of despair trying to find their answers. This is the true story of her only son, and the hours in which she may save him are swiftly passing. What shall she do?

She has turned to her friends to help. Some say she must save him, at any cost, and her own heart dictates that course. But others say that, if she saves him again from paying the penalty of his crime, she will ruin him for life. Will she?

In anguish, she wrote to a certain paper, asking us to help her. Her letter was published. Scores of answers were received.

The writers, like her friends, took both pro and con stands, but most of them were emphatically AGAINST sending a 19-year-old boy to jail.

Still that poor mother cannot decide. She begs us to publish her story once more, giving it wider publicity. So, in a last effort to find some answer which will help her through this tragic hour, we are broadcasting in this column her cry for help. And, that you may judge the quality of the advice already given, we publish the following letter, previously received:

Dear Miss Robinson:

The letter of Mrs. Mary Albright has caused me to recall the similar plight of another mother. Her son, having been pampered and protected, was well on the road to self-destruction. Then that son's protecting angels passed away; his older brother fell heir to the task of keeping this young good-for-nothing in line. He did, and the young man is well on the straight and narrow road to being a useful citizen.

Mrs. Albright should not intercede for her young scoundrel. For that purpose, we have courts. Our judges have a humane as well as a legal sense, and I am sure that this is a case beyond any action she could take. It is a case for the courts to decide.

The case should be permitted to follow the regular legal procedure. The young man should be arrested; should be jailed if he is unable to raise bail HIMSELF. The longer he is kept in jail before his trial the better.

After this young man's trial and ultimate conviction, then that is the mother's time to act. Let her make a plea to the court for probation for her son. I am sure the judge, if he thinks there is a chance of kindling that spark of decency in her son, will grant him probation, provided he makes restitution of his own efforts.

There is another thing. The mother should be warned not to have her son put in her custody during his probationery period. Let the regular probation officer be his custodian. This solution is her only chance. This is the time to make or break her son.

It has worked, and has brought another to realize that the world owes him a living but that it also requires that he work for it. This method guided another young man's destiny. I don't see why it would not operate in this case.

Just Folks

Foreigner

Oh, whether he speak in French or Greek
This fact of him still is true,
He'll have need for a friend to his journey's end
And need for a task to do.
As the swift hours go he will hungry grow,
He will wince at the clutch of pain,
And he'll bitterly sigh if his child should die
And his prayers prove all in vain.

He may dwell afar, where the tropics are
Or north where the cold winds blow,
But why should we sneer at his customs queer,
When under the skin we know
Till the day he dies he will share our sighs,
Find peace in the self-same way,
And haste with delight with the dusk of night
To share in his youngsters' play?

Foreigner, yes, we may that confess
In habits and language strange,
But brother to all in the great and small
Soul customs that never change.
As you and I he will sometimes cry
When sorrows his life invade,
And as you and I he was born to die,
Wherever his home is made.

Winning the War by Action—Action Now

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE ROOSEVELT ECONOMY bill has passed the Senate with 49 votes to spare, and the House has accepted the minor amendments adopted in the upper chamber; the beer tax bill, amended in the Senate to permit wine of 3.05 per cent, will pass speedily, and may be passed before this is published. And now measures for farm and job relief are to be presented, backed by the administration, and these will probably go through.

Such a record of achievement within such a brief period can only be approached by legislative activities in the critical periods of a war. It has been made possible by two reasons—one a positive leadership in government assumed by the head of the nation, and the other a realization in Congress that we actually are at war.

Claude G. Bowers

And we are winning the war. Retreat has been turned to advance. The croakers have been silenced. Defeatism has been scotched, if not killed.

And this is due to the magnificent support given by the people, regardless of party differences.

This amazingly quick change in the psychology of a people is reflected in the optimism of the market.

Congress Will Recess

With the farm and job relief measures presented and passed within a few days, Congress will recess for two or three weeks to permit the whipping into shape of permanent measures designed to end the vicious practices in banking and finance so largely responsible for the nation's near-approach to disaster. These will be law before the session is adjourned.

For the time being, no more extraordinary powers in the nature of an authorized or constitutional dictatorship will be asked. Should a similar necessity appear in the future before we emerge from the crisis such power may be asked again, but this does not now seem likely.

Going beyond the intent of our constitutional plan under extraordinary conditions is not at all unique. In days of war it is commonplace—and contemplated.

Many years ago Jefferson, who had the strictest views on the division of power, acted beyond the constitution in the purchase of Louisiana. There certainly was no Constitutional provision, as then understood, for the acquisition of territory. He knew it—and yet he acted—and he acted without authority from Congress.

But there was a crisis then. Europe was engaged in the Napoleonic wars. France, a powerful contender, had acquired Louisiana, at our back door. It was almost certain that with the French flag in New Orleans and the British flag at Montreal we would be involved.

Received Approval of Congress

We needed Louisiana to round out our national destiny; needed it because of the Mississippi, and statesmen had realized it for 15 years. But had conditions been normal and not threatening, we could have waited for its acquisition.

But under the conditions then existing immediate action was necessary. The opportunity came, certainly not without some contriving on our part, and Jefferson acted—without constitutional authority, and without the consultation of Congress.

It is interesting to observe that he would have preferred congressional authorization, and for a time he played with the idea of asking a constitutional amendment to cover the purchase.

But that would have been a public proclamation that he had acted without constitutional authority, and there was fear lest Napoleon, realizing that a bad bargain had been made, would take advantage of this situation to repudiate the agreement. This is the reason no constitutional amendment was proposed.

But he did get the approval of Congress.

Powers Granted to F. R. Are Necessary

In war, the executive may assume dictatorial powers, for the preservation of the nation.

Jefferson acted primarily without congressional sanction for the protection if not the preservation of the country.

The extraordinary powers granted by Congress to President Roosevelt are clearly necessary for the prevention of disaster and to meet an immediate emergency without debate and delay.

And in each case there is nothing inconsistent with the principles of our domestic institutions.

Democracy at war has the right and the power to arm the head of the nation with any authority required for the welfare of the country and that is the justification for democracy and its answer to its critics.

The Panic Has Stopped

All that has been done thus far has been to meet an immediate necessity, and what has been done with such decision, courage, and speed has met that necessity. The speed has met that necessity. The

When Congress reconvenes after a brief recess will come measures of a permanent nature designed to prevent a recurrence of the evils in the financial system which have contributed mightily to the recent panic of fear.

These reforms will not be dictated by those who stand in need of reforming. But they will not be dictated by prejudice, hate or ignorance. The only thing that will determine their nature will be public policy.

Happily the necessity for the reorganization of the banking system comes at a time when those in power are under no personal or political obligation to the erstwhile financial dictators of the nation.

The last few years have brought the realization that the banking system is not the personal property of the bankers. The banks have a public function and hereafter must bow to public law—and public interest.

Necessary We Move Rapidly

With any disturbing elements in Europe threatening war, it is necessary that we move rapidly in putting our domestic house in order. No doubt a sensational turn is being given the events across the sea. But it is nonsense to deny that things have happened recently that do not make for a sense of security.

Within the week the German Republic has ceased to be. Even Hindenbergh as ordered its flag from the breeze. Instead the flags of the monarchy and the Fascists become the German banner. Just what this denotes no one but those who are in control there knows.

But the effect has been to create a fear of war in France and other countries, and we may be sure that Ramsay MacDonald's visit to Mussolini is not disconnected from this fear.

The absurdity, the insanity, of another war at this juncture is manifest, but insanity usually makes wars. Never has the capacity of statesmanship been so positively put to the test as now.

It is easy for the speculative to align the warring nations of 18 years ago into hostile camps again, but it is impossible to believe that common sense will not find a way to save the world from another major tragedy.

AMERICAN'S HOME COLLEGE

Questions and answers prepared by members of the faculty of Long Island University outline what they consider a well-educated person ought to know.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION:

Are the woman novelist's men better than the man novelist's women?

By DR. JAMES R. FOSTER
Professor of English

There is probably a tendency on the part of the feminine novelist to over-idealize men; that is, her heroes; but what surprises men readers most is that women often count as chief virtues things that they would scale much lower.

George Eliot, it seems, is the principal sinner here. Some of here men critics declared that she could never tell a cad from a gentleman.

Daniel Deronda, it is true, is rather seraphic, and Tito Melema, her idea of a rascal, is a woman to the end of his toes.

If any woman could see clearly, it was Jane Austen; her men are usually convincing, yet her women take most of her time.
